THE STRUGGLE

THE FENNS. Were it not for one detail in Mrs. Fenn's appearance—a detail which a man would have considered insignificant—Edith would have felt extremely uneasy about the prospect of having Jackie Ferrol come into frequent touch with the new neighbors. Mrs. Fenn's faded yellow hair had undoubtedly been at one time brilliant with bleach. Her big blue eyes had surely seen much of that kind of life of which a home body like Edith knows only through plays and books—the life of adventure of much gaiety, abandon, irresponsibility, a life full of breaks with convention.

But the gold-rimmed spectacles the woman wore, in such odd contrast for the quiet respectability they suggested, reassured Edith. They stood for the new outlook on life the woman must have taken, for the new page turned in her career, for new passions and hopes which seemed to center on the little boy. His thin voice was now raised in glee as he steered Jackie Ferrol's skatmobile, with Jackie manning the back seat.

A small of preserves cooking wafted into the living room where Edith had invited Mrs. Fenn in. The newcomer smelled it at the same instant as Edith. "Please don't let me keep you from your work—and how good it smells!" She said it with so much wistfulness for neighborly recognition that Edith said:

"Won't you come in the kitchen with me and help me decide on the flavoring of my preserves?" Mrs. Fenn eagerly accepted the invitation. She seemed as hungry for Edith's friendliness as her little boy was for Jackie's society. Edith saw her look of surprise at the amount of preserves she was making.

"Oh, it's not all for us," said Edith smilingly. "I am filling an order for a Danville grocer for a hundred glasses of preserves." "Do you make any for outsiders?" Mrs. Fenn asked eagerly. "Yes, indeed!" Edith said. "Then won't you make five—ten—twenty dollars' worth for us?" Mrs. Fenn cried. "My son will like them and so will—Mr. Fenn." Edith looked up in surprise. Twenty dollars' worth of preserves would last a small family indefinitely; yet Mrs. Fenn had given the order as though twenty dollars for preserves was an infinitely less important consideration than the chance it gave to cultivate Edith's acquaintance.

"You're rather rash to order so much," Edith smiled. "You may not like any of it!" Again she was surprised at the eagerness with which Mrs. Fenn cried: "I know it will be the best that can be made! Otherwise you would not be making it. I've seen a good deal of life, and I've learned to know people and what they are capable of." "That's kind of you," Edith said. "I can bring it over to your house on Sunday, if you wish."

Mrs. Fenn hesitated. Then as though she was summoning a sort of defiant courage to her support, she said: "I'll help you bring it over provided you stop for a little visit with us." Edith saw no way out. But she was uneasy. At this moment a man walked quickly up to the new house. He had such an air of being hurried, penetrating, antisocial. It is not a greasy salve and it does not stain. When others fail it is the one dependable treatment for skin troubles of all kinds. The E. W. Rose Co., Cleveland, O.

HEART PROBLEMS

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of twenty years. I have been going with one young man for three years who lives in the city, and corresponding with another who lives out of town. My out-of-town friend who lives about three hundred miles from here comes to see me twice a year. I love both of them dearly and would hate to give up either. Each one objects to my going with the other, and they have both asked me to marry them. I don't know what to do, as I don't know which one I love the more. Will you kindly give me your advice.

BLACK EYES.

You are not in love, or you would know which of the men you care the more for. Keep both for friends and if one objects too much, let him go. It would be unwise to talk about one of the boys to the other, because it would naturally cause jealousy.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) How late should a girl of sixteen be allowed to have gentlemen friends if her parents do not object to them? (2) Should a girl permit a young man to assist her by taking her arm?

THANK YOU. (1) A girl of sixteen is too young to entertain callers after ten o'clock. (2) It is all right for a boy to assist a girl by taking her arm when it is necessary, but it is not good form for him to take her arm all the time, or to walk arm in arm.

PLENTY OF WORK FOR MEN IN S. A. T. C.

Mrs. Carl Jessup, of North Twenty-first street, has just received a letter from her son, Talbert, who is in the Students' training camp, which is connected with the State Normal school, at Lacrosse, Wis.

In it he says, "You can notice a big difference between here and old Indiana; here the German residents talk the language everywhere even on the streets and I feel like doing something desperate when I hear them. We have very changeable weather and it has been awful cold several times; overcoats are very much in evidence. I have only seen two negroes since I came here almost a month ago. Tell all the fellows that I know, that I said 'Hello' and that they don't know what work is. Some folks have the idea that we who are in Students' training camps have a snap, but here is our daily routine:

6:30 a. m.—Reveille.
6:45 a. m.—Assembly.
7:00 a. m.—Breakfast.
7:30-8:30 a. m.—Drill.
8:30-12:00 a. m.—Academic.
12:15 p. m.—Mess call.
1:00-4:30 p. m.—Academic.
4:30-5:30 p. m.—Recreation.
6:00 p. m.—Retreat.
6:00-7:30 p. m.—Freedom.
7:30-9:30 p. m.—Supervised study.
10:00 p. m.—Taps.

We were measured for our uniforms last Saturday and sworn into the service on Monday, Sept. 30. The lieutenant, who is at present our superior officer, told us to hold ourselves in readiness to be called at any time; we only expect to get to stay here until the first of December at the most, at which time we will be examined and sent out to the various cantonments. We are all feeling fine and

APPRECIATIVE WOMEN

How often is the question asked, "Are the testimonial letters published in the advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound genuine and true?" In answer to that question we want to answer most emphatically yes; and it is gladness for health restored by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after weeks, months and sometimes years of suffering that has prompted these women to write such letters in order that other women who suffer as they once did may profit by their experience.
