Refreshments complying with the regulations of the Food administration will be served, and there will be a smoke.

Late in the evening President Dill will give the members an opportunity to bring up any question affecting the community.

Former President of Franklin College Dies

FRANKLIN, Ind., Nov. 2.—Dr. William Taylor Stott, 82, for thirty-three years president of Franklin college and one of the most widely known Baptist ministers and educators in the country, died at his home here Friday. His age and a complication of diseases caused death. In 1905 Dr. Stott retired voluntarily as president of Franklin college and devoted his time to writing a history of the Baptist church in Indiana. Dr. Stott also served as superintendent of the Indiana Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' home at Knightstown, Ind.

APPOINTED MUSIC DIRECTOR
OXFORD, O., Nov. 2.—Miss Ruth Stephenson, a talented musician of this village, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Stephenson, has been appointed director of music in the Seamen's Society, Boston, Mass., and left yesterday to assume her duties.

WAR CARTOONS OF RAEMACKERS TO BE SHOWN WEDNESDAY

One hundred and twenty-five of the Louis Raemackers war cartoons, which have appeared in the London and Paris papers, are being hung in the Richmond public art gallery today. The exhibition will open next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The cartoons are the work of a Hollander who, because of their strong anti-German propaganda, was compelled to flee to England, where he has worked for over three years of the war.

The German government offered 15,000 guildings for the body of Raemackers, dead or alive, and has declared that it will demand a settlement of accounts from Holland after the war.

The Richmond Art association is offering this exhibit to the public as part of the education to come out of the history of the war and the spirit and ideals back of it. Everyone is invited and urged to see this collection.

Mrs. M. F. Johnston will give a short introductory talk illustrated by some slides, some of which are later cartoons, and which do not appear in the exhibit, in the high school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday, immediately preceding the opening of the art gallery.

Make Effort to Keep Labor on Airplane Work

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Manufacturers of airplanes and airplane parts have been requested by the production department of the bureau of aircraft production to attend a meeting here on Wednesday night, November 6, to consider the labor problem. The call says that production has been reduced since Germany began her peace move. While the influenza epidemic has served to slow down production, there is said to be a growing tendency among employees to look for new jobs that will be permanent when peace comes.

A movement will be started at the meeting to eliminate competition in the labor market, among the firms engaged in the building of aircraft and on other government work.

REFUSED ADMISSION

OXFORD, O., Nov. 2.—Ralph Becker and Gordon Phillips, students of Miami university, were yesterday denied admission to Miami's S. A. T. C. because their induction papers had been delayed. The boys left at once for Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., hoping to get into the officers' training camp. Both have had military experience. The fault seems to center with their respective draft boards.

The business of the London Stock Exchange, under peace conditions, requires the services of 25,000 persons every day.

What the President Asks:--

"Fellow countrymen—The congressional elections are at hand. They occur in the most critical period our country has ever faced or is likely to face in our time. If you have approved of my leadership and wish me to continue to be your unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, I earnestly beg that you will express yourselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both the Senate and the House of Representatives."

Why the President Asks It--

"The return of a Republican majority to either House of Congress would, moreover, certainly be interpreted on the other side of the water as a repudiation of my leadership. Spokesmen of the Republican party are urging you to select a Republican Congress in order to back up and support the President, but even if they should in this way impose upon some credulous voters on this side of the water, they would impose on no one on the other side. It is well understood there, as here, that the Republican leaders desire not so much to support the President as to control him.

"The people of the allied countries with whom we are associated against Germany are quite familiar with the significance of elections. They would find it very difficult to believe that the voters of the United States had chosen to support their President by electing to the Congress a majority controlled by those who are not in fact in sympathy with the attitude and action of the administration."

What President McKinley Asked in 1898

at Kokomo on Oct. 21, 1898. President McKinley said: "And we must continue to stand together. So long as we have any differences abroad, we must have none at home. Whenever we get through with our differences with another nation, then it will be time to resume our old disputes at home. But until that time we must stand for a common purpose, and stand together until the settlements of the war shall be embodied in the permanent form of a public treaty. We commenced the war not for gain or greed or new possessions. We commenced it for freedom and to relieve our neighbors of oppression. And, having accomplished that, we must assume all the responsibilities that justly belong to that war, whatever they may be, and I am sure that the people of the country, without regard to party, setting aside all differences and distinctions, will remain together until we shall finally settle the terms of peace."

The Indianapolis News on Oct. 22, 1898, Said:

"No attempt is made to conceal the fact that the Republican managers hope to profit by the visit of the President (McKinley) to Indiana. While the receptions all along the route were nonpartisan in character, the Republican State Committee saw to it that every effort was put forth to turn the meetings to Republican advantage. By prearrangement, Republican 'spell binders' addressed every gathering, except the one in this city, after the President's train had departed. All of the arrangements for the President's trip in the State and for the stops were made by Republican managers. Yesterday afternoon after the President had left the city, the executive committee of the party met here and summed up the results. It was agreed that great benefit to the Republicans must come of the visit of the President. The crowds at every stopping place were even larger than the managers of the trip had expected, and the supporters of the administration were very much pleased with the unanimity of sentiment displayed everywhere. The campaign cry of the Republicans from now until the election day is to be: 'Stand by the President!'"

The Indianapolis News on Oct. 20, 1898, Said:

"It is not wise to swap horses when you are crossing the stream, was one of the wise sayings of Abraham Lincoln. Is not that applicable to the present state of national politics? We are in the midst of problems growing out of the war. It is true, to be sure, that in the war there was no partisanship; that Congress to a man supported the administration on the main question. But in the questions now to come up, politics will be sure to play a great part. It is better for all concerned that the President should be supported by a Congress in which his own party is in the majority. Besides all that, the return of a Democratic majority would surely be interpreted abroad as a condemnation of the administration."

The Indianapolis News on Nov. 4, 1898, Said:

"But, however independents  may vote on the State ticket, we urge them to make no mistake when it comes to congressmen. Here the vote has a direct bearing on national politics. It is important that the national administration should be sustained by a friendly Congress."

What ex-President Harrison Said Oct. 20, 1898

"Another consideration, I think, should strongly influence the voters of the state. The nation went to war with Spain, supported by the moral sentiment of the great majority of our people of all parties. It was felt that as to Cuba there was a distinct call upon the United States to interpose for the ending of Spanish cruelties and misgovernment there. The firing lines have been withdrawn and our ships are largely in our own harbors, after achievements on land and sea that have given increased fame to American arms; but our foreign relations are still acute and unsettled, and the appeal to which the response was so generous and non-partisan at the beginning of the war, to stand by our own country and its executive and administrative officers, should still be felt and responded to. Our election results should not give, or even seem to give, encouragement to those who would find in our discords and divided counsels their advantage. Our British cousins have the good habit of standing by when their nation is conducting delicate and irritating foreign questions."

What Mr. Harrison Said Nov. 1, 1898

"If the word goes forth that the people of the United States are standing solidly behind the President, the task of the peace commissioners will be easy, but if there is a break in the ranks—if the Democrats score a telling victory, if Democratic Senators, Congressmen and Governors are elected—Spain will see in it a gleam of hope; she will take fresh hope, and a renewal of hostilities, more war, may be necessary to secure to us what we have already won."

What Col. Roosevelt Said in 1898

"Remember that whether you will or not, your votes this year will be viewed by the nations of Europe from one standpoint only. They will draw no fine distinctions. A refusal to sustain the President this year will, in their eyes, be read as a refusal to sustain the war and to sustain the efforts of our peace commission to secure the fruits of war. Such a refusal may not inconceivably bring about a rupture of the peace negotiations. It will give heart to our defeated antagonists; it will make possible the interference of those doubtful neutral nations, who in this struggle have wished us ill."

What the Indianapolis Journal (Harry S. New, Ed) Said October 20, 1898

"In this situation there is but one course for patriotic Americans to pursue. They must stand by President McKinley and hold up his hands by electing members of Congress who will support and defend his war policy and its logical sequences.  The Spaniards, aided by the French press and the Spanish-American press in the United States, are trying to rob us of a part of the fruits of victory, and are hoping to be strengthened in their position by a Democratic victory in November. There is but one course for patriotic Americans to pursue, and that is to stand by the President and make the next Congress as strongly Republican as the present one is."
