The National Union of Women Suffrage Societies, the non-militant organization of English women which established the "Waacs" or Women's Army Auxiliary Corps and the Women's Land Army in the early days of the war, and brought them to the front ranks of army auxiliary organizations during its tenure, led the women of the world in formulating a demand for women representatives on the Peace Commission. The president of the Union, Mrs. Mildred Garrett Fawcett, tells of this step in a recent letter to Mrs. Catt, president of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance. Only a few days before its receipt, Mrs. Catt had written Mrs. Fawcett urging her to co-ordinate the demand of the women of the continent for the appointment of women representatives of their respective countries to the Peace Commission.

CUPID COMES MEDDLING.

The moving picture fiasco left Edith feeling like a caged bird, exhausted with ineffectual beating against bars. Cudgel her brain as she might, turn this way and that to find a path into financial freedom, she met failure every time. Added to her sense of bafflement was the knowledge that she had hurt her husband's pride and wounded his feelings.

Daily, too, she read the dreary news of war and want and the ever-soaring cost of life's necessities. With the added expense of her brother's maintenance, the buying of school supplies for the children and the incessant demands of neighborhood clubs and patriotically-intentioned organizations to which local pride, if nothing more, compelled her to contribute, Edith Ferrol waged an incessant battle against debt.

Her brother's debt to the Fenns was simply impossible to cancel. Edith's heart sank as she realized how much stronger Fate's rulings are than the forces given us to fight with. Frightened at her despondency Edith shook herself together, re-solving to focus her energies upon one thing—the immediate triumph of Ned and Ned's invention.

To keep up her spirits she went down into Edgar's workshop where he was putting the last touches to the actual, finished water heater.

"Look-a-here, sis!" cried Ned enthusiastically as she came in, "she works! In just one-half hour by your innersoll you can ascend to the family bathroom, turn the well-known tap and behold—superheated fluid will gush forth as by magic. In one month, thirty days," added Edgar with a bow of mock dignity marred by an imitation stumble, "your worthless young brother will be raised from the ranks of pitiless poverty to the altitudes of affluence."

Edith loved his antics. Her heart lightened at his young enthusiasm. Through his foolishness and his irresponsible manner somehow his belief in his own ability projected itself. "Oh, Ned, darling!" Edith pressed her cheek against her brother's sturdy shoulder, struggling to keep out of her voice the mingled eagerness and anxiety she felt. "Oh, little brother, can it really be true? Can I actually turn on the—"

The sound of footsteps and voices upstairs interrupted her.

"Where's all the folks, Kiddiekins? Oh—down in Uncle Edgar's workshop? Well, we'll pile right down!" It was Lil Blake interrogating little Jack Ferrol; no mistaking Lil's exuberant soprano. "Come, Fay, dear—watch out and don't stumble with those silly high heels of yours."

The quick movement Ned Flowerston made startled Edith, holding to his muscular arm. One of those flashes of insight or instinct or psychic sensitivity or whatever it is that causes a woman to feel a thing a fact before it has been proved to be one revealed to Edith Ferrol that a sentimental attachment existed between her brother and Lil Blake's frothy debutante niece, Fay Summers. Her intuition was strengthened when, a moment later, Lil and the young woman bustled into the cellar workshop to the accompaniment of effervescent chatter and hilarity. Edith had vaguely known that Miss Summers liked Ned. But until this moment she had regarded whatever affair there was as a sort of harmless flapper romance, superficial and fleeting.

The promptness with which Edgar left his work, his hurry to roll down his sleeves and smooth his hair, his hasty inspection of his fingernails, and—most telling of all to a woman—the way he bent over the blond and shrimpy-slender Fay in greeting her, showed Edith that an interest apart from the mundane one of putting a new kind of water heater on the market had place in her brother's mind. How much of his mind it occupied, how urgent it was to be satisfied she must find out.

"Why, you wonderful boy!" Lil was exclaiming as Ned exploited his gallant heater. "Let's go straight upstairs and see if the water really does go hot instantly. Come, Fay, child!"

There was an indefinable disturbing something in Lil's tone, in her manner as she spoke to her flapper niece and glanced at the eligible young man—doubtless eligible if his invention was really panning out.

It was a sort of triumphal ceremony, this procaciously turning of a spigot and, after an instant's suspense, seeing the steaming water actually gush forth. And Edith's heart leaped with joy.

"Oh! How perfectly marvelous!" Lil Blake was in ecstasies of praise. "We must celebrate! You all come over to dinner tonight—just a little family party! You dear children and us old folks!"

And at Lil's meaningful mouthing of the phrase "family party" Edith's joy was dashed with ice.

Red Cross Canteen Opened in Baden

PARIS, Nov. 22.—A delegation of the American Red Cross has crossed the Rhine into Baden at Huningen (Huningen?), placing the first Americans on German soil. The place where the river was crossed is a short distance north of the Swiss frontier.

The German soldiers accepted American flags, and officers cleared the roads for the Red Cross trucks and insisted that the Red Cross workers drink with them.

WHY USE EGGS?

One-Fifth Spoonful to a muffin or slice of cake is about the proportion of egg you get. Eggs are nourishing and have high food value, but they are not used in cooking for their food value or their taste. They are used for leavening and thickening.

Valier's Community FLOUR

TRADE MARK REGISTERED U.S. PAT. OFF.

They know its better flour.

Quality in flour shows in flavor. If you thought that all flours were alike in quality these times, a single baking with Valier's Community Flour will change your mind. Its better—emphatically better than ordinary flour—for the simple reason that we pay a premium price to get the best wheat, and take the care to mill it by a slow, thorough process. Then we sift through silk repeatedly to get fine texture.

The price of Valier's Community Flour is regulated by the Government. It is more economical than ordinary flour, because it makes more successful baking and more baking per sack. Buy a 24-lb. sack at our risk—money refunded if you're not delighted. Ask your grocer.

All restrictions as to the amount of wheat flour you can use per month and as to buying and using substitutes with wheat flour have been removed by the Government. You can buy and use white flour just as you did before the war.

Industrial Transition Expected to be Gradual in Richmond

Industrial transition in the after-war period will be gradual here, according to Richmond manufacturers. "Richmond will need a more or less extended transition period," said H. R. Robinson, chairman of the Industries Board in the Tenth District of the Cincinnati region. "Some manufacturers will feel more depression than others, depending entirely upon the work they are doing. However, I do not think there will be any serious depression in Richmond."

"There seems to be a general feeling of optimism and I think that the future depends upon the ability of the American people to meet the problems of reconstruction. If met calmly and wisely there will be no serious depression."

"Cancellation continues but the government is placing restrictions on cancellation orders so as to protect the manufacturers and the employees. The manufacturers are co-operating with the government in the period of transition to help employment."

So far as is known no direct government contracts have been cancelled in Richmond yet.

The Starr Piano company is gradually going back to non-war work according to Clarence Gennett. The Victor Aircraft corporation which has been operating in the Starr Piano company will continue indefinitely, probably until things are more settled in Washington, said President Heinrichs, who is now located in Richmond.

The Adam Bartel company has completed two government contracts for shirts and jackets and are now working on a contract for flannel shirts. This is their last war contract. When this is completed they will begin to work on civilian orders. They say that they have enough work to keep all of their employees busy.

The F. and N. Lawn Mower company finished what contracts they had some weeks ago and are now doing non-war work.

A. J. Harwood, manager of the Atlas Underwear company said that they had orders to double their efforts in war work at their plant.

The only cancellation orders in Richmond have been indirect. The Automatic Tool company has received many cancellation orders from manufacturers working on direct government contracts, according to William F. Bockhoff, president. He stated that last week he received $150,000 worth of cancellations.

J. E. Jones, vice president of the Reliance Foundry said that they have had many cancellations in that plant from manufacturers doing direct government contract work.

L. C. Handley of the United States Employment Bureau said that there was nothing to indicate that there were more people out of employment now than there were before peace came. There are no more people in Richmond applying for positions than there were previous to that time, he said.

American Merchant Marine Lost 145 Vessels in War

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—From the beginning of the European war to the day of the signing of the armistice the American merchant marine lost, through acts of the Central Powers, 145 vessels of 354,449 gross tons, involving the loss of 775 lives.

Including lives lost by the sinking of army and navy vessels, the total passes the thousand mark.

The major destruction was caused by submarines. In the four and a quarter years of the war 51 vessels of American registry were torpedoed, and 37 sunk by gunfire. Only seven were lost by striking mines.

Only 19 vessels were sunk previous to the entrance of the United States into the war, the losses from April 6, 1917, to November 11 last being 126. The tactics of the Germans in using the costly torpedoes only upon the larger vessels was illustrated by the fact that the torpedoed vessels averaged about 4,500 gross tons, while those sunk by gunfire averaged about 2,200 tons. A large proportion of the ships sunk by gunfire were sailing vessels which could offer no resistance and which were abandoned by their crews when the U-boats appeared. Of the 775 lives lost by the merchant seamen, only one life was lost in the destruction of the 60 sailing vessels.

Just allow us about ONE-THIRD of the time that it takes out of town mail orders to be filled.

Keep this list for future reference; this list may not appear again but we will have special mail order prices in addition to this from time to time.

Orders amounting to $10.00 or more will be delivered free if you wish; orders below $5.00 will be at regular market prices; orders above $5.00 may be had at mail order prices if orders are mailed or handed to us and goods called for.
