A Woman's Business

By Zoe Beckley

THE DOOR OF HOPE

Wait took Lucy to her door. He felt deeply touched at the fine spirit she and Janet had shown toward each other all that evening. He told Lucy so in a few words, indirectly, as was usual.

"Won't you come up and smoke a cigarette?" Lucy asked wistfully, on the step of the studio building where she lived. There was such a clear wish in her manner to play hostess to him, even in pretense, and for a few moments, that Wait had not the heart to refuse. They went up to her room. Wait offered a cigarette, but Lucy refused.

"Wait, I am so glad I met Janet tonight as I did, I just must say something of what I feel," she said in a low voice. "If she had shown herself the conventional, jealous, suspicious wife I should have hated her, but she would not have given her a thought, no matter what happened—unless, perhaps, to fight her! But she isn't. And I'm touched—and happy—and miserable!"

Wait could not bear to hear her, for there was utter, sincere loneliness of heart in her voice. She had once known what it was to own a home. She had known motherhood. She had known what it was to lose in quick succession, hope, love, home and her child.

"I wonder, can one run away from oneself—from life?" she went on. "Suppose I went to Paris—away from you—away from Janet? Would I forget what I am missing? If I were like a coat one wears. If one could slip out of it like from a misfit garment, and slip into another one! With so many people it is so! I envy them—I envy them!" she cried, with a sob. She hid her face in the curtains of the window, pretending to be looking out.

Wait was racked with pity. He went to her and took her gently by the arm. "Listen, Lucy, little woman—!" he said slowly. "Don't try to slip away from life! Don't run away from it! One never knows what is coming!"

He stopped there. He had no clear notion of just what he meant to convey with the words. He only knew the feeling he had. He wanted this woman to have all she wanted to make her happy. She deserved it. She had not sold her rights to life.

U. S. EMPLOYMENT OFFICE TO CLOSE

The United States employment service office which has been located in the Comstock building since August, will close Saturday, according to word received Monday in the official bulletin by Miss Mary K. Fisher, examiner in charge. The office will be closed owing to lack of funds caused by failure of the emergency bill to pass Congress.

Lawrence Handley, now a member of the real estate firm of Kelly and Handley, was in charge of the office until February. The work was taken up then by Miss Fisher, formerly in charge of the women's department.

The office has taken care of many soldiers and civilians seeking employment. During the time that the bureau has been open in the Comstock building, more than 100 persons have been given employment in other counties over which the local office has jurisdiction. Whether or not the office will be continued will be up to the city. A bill has passed the legislature which creates an employment commission and also carries an appropriation to provide for an employment office where the city desires one.

Famous "Princess Pat" Regiment Home Again

(By Associated Press) HALIFAX, N. S., March 18.—The famous "Princess Pat's" Canada's first troops to fight on French soil, returned home today, arriving here on the steamer Carmania from England. The 49th Battalion and the 40th and 50th Canadian Mounted Rifles also were aboard.

While nominally it was the "Princess Pat" regiment which returned, only thirty-two of the arrivals were among the original unit which went overseas in 1914. The other home-comers are replacements that were necessary to keep the regiment up to normal strength, the fierce fighting in fifteen of the notable engagements of the war playing havoc with this Canadian unit.

Ypres, Polygon Wood, Vimy Ridge, Lens, Cambrai and ten other places where the British forces fought valiantly knew the presence of the "Princess Pats," and during its service the regiment had nine commanding officers who saw their unit twice nearly wiped out. Two commanders were killed. Eight won the distinguished service order.

Tendency to Constipation?

USE THIS LAXATIVE!

Dietitians advise a "careful diet," but that is troublesome to most people; physical culturists advise "certain exercises," which is good if one has both the time and the inclination. Doctors advise diet and exercise and medicine. The question is, shall it be a cathartic or purgative medicine? Or a mild, gentle laxative?

Thousands have decided the question to their own satisfaction by using a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A small dose gives a free, easy movement of the bowels. It is the best substitute for nature herself. In fact, since the ingredients are wholly from the vegetable kingdom it may truthfully be said it is a natural laxative.

Its positively but gentle action on the bowels makes it an ideal remedy for constipation. The dose is small, and it may be taken with perfect safety until the bowels are regulated and act again of their own accord.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the war, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 26 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

FREE SAMPLES.—If you have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin send for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 462 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. If there are babies at home, ask for a copy of Dr. Caldwell's book, "The Care of Baby."
