

KLINE SCORES OPPONENTS OF COUNTY AGENT

Petty Politicians Blamed for Hampering of Progressive Farm Activities.

Petty politicians alleged to have hampered the county agent work of Wayne county were scored by County Agent J. C. Kline in his farewell talk to 100 members of the Farming association Saturday afternoon at the court house.

A membership of 225 was reported at the meeting as a result of last week's drive, and officials are confident that the membership of the association will be more than 1,000 in the next few weeks.

The county organization decided to join the state farmers' federation formed at Indianapolis last week, after hearing the report of Arthur Crum and Theodore Davis, who represented the Wayne county association.

"Back up the man who takes my place," said Kline. "Don't let him be hampered by the petty politicians, of whom there are several around the court house."

County Officers Blamed. "The work of this office is being run by men who shouldn't have anything to say about it. They are not in sympathy with the farmers. The whole trouble here has been that the men back of the office are not interested in it. If the control of the office were in the hands of the live progressive farmers of the county there would be no trouble at all."

Unnamed county officers, and the county board of education were at the bottom of the trouble, Kline said. He said there was no hint of trouble until January 1, when, just after a meeting of the county board, the report was circulated that his office had cost the county between $7,000 and $8,000.

His stenographer was then taken away, and he was notified that his appropriation for next year would be only $150, he said, but the county board and the commissioners were shown that the appropriation was fixed by law at $1,500.

Satisfied With Work. Difficultly he had had in getting his salary was sketched by Kline. He said one county officer had persistently refused to sign receipts for Purdue money, and had told Kline that he would sign receipts until Kline left, and that he would not sign more after that, and that he would show Purdue University Wayne county was just as big as the university was.

Kline thanked the members of the farming association for the way in which they had backed him up, and said he believed the progressive farmers were in favor of the office. He expressed himself as very well satisfied with the work of the year.

A general discussion, during which charges were made that this county board of education was unfavorable to the county agent, took place after Kline's talk. The board is waiting for Purdue University to recommend a man, a township trustee said.

FAILURE IS

[Continued From Page One.] suffering. Will they do it? I do not believe it. Remember that for months and months the people of the world have been told that they were moulding the future as one kneads dough, were approaching the termination of their beneficent labors and that Utopia was at most not more than two or three blocks away. Remember how much these millions of people have suffered and how little illusion and confidence was left to them after all, at the end of four and a half years of agony.

Think then what may be the emotion of these people on the first of May or first of June when the truth can no longer be concealed that the Peace Congress at last is licensed by the governments to announce that one or two wars are about to commence.

Now, last of all, what about the chance of peace at the hands of the Paris conference? Within a week the conference of ten has been reduced to a conference of four, just as the conference of one hundred was reduced to a conference of ten. Theoretically, this would lead to the facilitation of business, but actually, whether you divide nothing by one thousand by ten or by four the result is nothing, and in all cases there has been no policy and there is no policy. There is no common objective, no one dominating influence, nothing but four men representing four countries with totally different visions and necessities, trying to accommodate living facts in this sad world of ours, alike to abstract principles of the league of nations, and to the hopelessly concrete promises of the prime ministers of England, France and Italy.

Nothing has happened since the council of four succeeded the council of ten which suggests the smallest promise. I am told that Germany has within the last forty-eight hours sent a polite but pointed interrogation to Paris: "As to the invitation you are going to send us to come down there, kindly let us know whether your purpose is to ask us to sign a peace or to discuss one." Which by interpretation, would seem to be that the Germans may not even come to Paris unless they are permitted in advance to have assurance that their views will be heard and permitted to change the conclusion arrived at here.

Three Months to Decide. The man whose judgment on the subject and whose information is best in all Europe, told me last night that not until the end of the next three months could we know whether Europe would survive the world war or go down in a general smash. In the last few days I have had opportunity to talk with many people coming out of Germany, Austria and even Hungary. Their testimony does not vary. They agree that Germany will not sign any treaty of peace such as Paris plans to impose. In the same time, I have talked with many men close to the inner circles of the Paris Conference and I have found no one who believed that the Paris Conference under existing circumstances could ever reach a decision about the Treaty of Peace. Last of all, no one attempted to disguise the fact that the utter paralysis of will and utter absence of common policy in Paris is permitting Bolshevism to gain provinces every week. We invited the Bolsheviks to go to Prinkipo two months ago; now they have come to Budapest. We are about to evacuate Odessa, we are told that Roumania is on the point of collapse, and Poland almost certainly doomed. We know that both could have been saved four months ago.

It seems to me that without sharing the panic now existing in Paris, the American people ought to understand that there is now at least a possibility that within the next three months Bolshevism will overrun all Europe, save perhaps that part patrolled by our own soldiers, that Germany is almost certainly manipulating this Bolshevik rush in the hope that when it has exhausted the powers of resistance of her enemies she will be able to resume her attack, having escaped the consequence of her military defeat, that despair in the Allied nations over the failure of the peace conference to make peace and thus give at least a measure of recompense to millions of men and women for the supreme agony of this war, may lead these people in the presence of a new war to an act of greater folly.

In sum, it seems to me that the time has come when it should be recognized in America that the conference of peace is within two steps of failure, that the decisions which it is still unable to make may be beyond its power to enforce when, if ever, they are made.

How One Woman

Saved a Big Paint Bill

The living room woodwork was dingy. Her husband thought it needed repainting.

But with wifely care for the family purse, she thought she would try Fels-Naptha Soap (as suggested on the wrapper) before going to a painter to have the job done.

And what a surprise followed! The white paint stood out like new. The naptha dissolved the surface dirt which came off at once.

On that woodwork that you think requires painting or refinishing, try Fels-Naptha Soap! Use it for every soap-and-water-purpose around the house—for closets, floors, porcelain bath tubs, linoleum—as well as on greasy pots, pans and dishes.

And of course—always use it for clothes; in water, cool, lukewarm or hot, as you prefer—although hot water is not necessary.
