

LEGISLATION TO COMBAT RISE IN PRICES PLANNED

Anderson Bill Introduced in House Limits Control of Packers Over Food.

By WILLIAM R. SANBORN.

The recent agitation for some sort of repressive or regulatory action by the government, to limit the activity of the packing group, has led to the introduction of a bill in congress, providing for the licensing of the packers. The bill was introduced in the house by Representative Kenyon, of Iowa, on Monday.

Numerous suggestions have been made by the Federal Trade commission to the same purpose, and these were adopted in part by the framers of the bill, but by no means as a whole. We understand that the bill makes no attempt to "control" distribution. With reference to the reasons for and the purposes of the bill, a Chicago Tribune correspondent at Washington quotes Representative Anderson as saying:

"This bill is founded upon the theory that the business of the packers is so large, so inter-related with unrelated food products business, and its expansion in and control over all lines of food products so menacing and so inimical to the interests of both producers and consumers as to make essential government control of the industry."

Purposes of the Bill. We have said that the bill does not attempt to control distribution, and by this we mean not "directly or specifically." But we judge that the license issued will be for buying, selling or doing certain things, in certain lines, and only in the lines specified in said license. This would seem to be the pith of the whole matter. One of the aims of the bill is to "accomplish a divestiture of the packers' interests in the stockyards." There can be no doubt whatever that the broad efficiency of the great stockyards is almost entirely the result of the packers' efforts to build up an organization which is almost frictionless, and which comes pretty close to being automatic in action. That the packers should be large stockholders in such yards and terminals is the most natural thing in the world, because, they, as individuals are the most vitally interested.

With reference to this fact Mr. Armour stated before a committee in congress that so far as Armour & Company are concerned they would not object to selling all such stock they owned; providing they could have the assurance of equally good service. It would release a lot of money, he said, which could be profitably used in their industry.

The second notable feature of the bill, according to Representative Anderson, is: "To establish a control and to place a limitation upon the packers' interest in and control over industries, such as production and distribution of rice, breakfast foods, canned products other than meats, and the wholesale and retail merchandising of these and other products unrelated to the packing industry; to place the refrigerator and other specially equipped cars for perishable products on a common carrier basis; to establish a permissive storage and market system which will enable the small packer or other dealer in food products to compete with the branch houses operated by the packers."

A Pretty Large Order. This brief paragraph includes a pretty large order, which the wholesale grocers, coffee roasters and independent canners will be happy to see filled. Just what the fate of the bill may ultimately be, or what the amendments that are likely to be offered in debate, there is no telling. But there can be no question of the bill being supported by large commercial interests, and that the packers will rally in opposition can scarcely be questioned.

The licenses are to be issued by the secretary of agriculture to (a) persons or corporations engaged in the slaughtering or meat packing business; (b) persons or corporations conducting and operating stockyards; (c) stockyards commission merchants; (d) persons collecting or distributing live-stock market news; (e) persons buying, selling or shipping poultry or poultry products, also dairy products, in commerce. As to subdivision "E" persons of firms whose gross business is less than $500,000 per year will be exempt. This strikes directly at the great packers and the cold storage men in their control or employ, who handle poultry, eggs, butter and cheese, and is a most vital provision.

The bill, which is quite voluminous, prohibits packers from indulging "in unfair, unjustly discriminatory or deceptive device in commerce; the selling to any other licensee any part of his business for the purpose of appropriating the supply, or unreasonably affecting the price." Nor must he conspire with any other licensee for the purpose of limiting or preventing competition.

Strenuous Fight Probable. We anticipate a long and interesting fight on this bill, if it finally emerges from the committee room, which it probably will. It is a large meeting of grocery distributors, principally retailers, held in an interior New York town a few weeks ago, there was talk of a boycott against packers who might become interested in "chain stores", it being broadly intimated that some of them are already so interested. This, however, is vigorously denied. It would seem, too, that the packers have plenty of wholesale business to occupy their time and capital fully without dabbling in retail distribution.

Representative Anderson's bill shows the trend of public thought and feeling. The terrific cost of necessities, which show no evidence of declining prices, in any quarter, will probably lead to considerable attempted legislation, should the Anderson bill fail of enactment in some effective form.

Palladium readers will recall our statements with reference to the action of the National Coffee Roasters' association, and also as to what was done at the convention of wholesale grocers in Cincinnati, a short time ago. Both of these bodies appointed committees to act upon the subject of this new bill, and each of these national bodies have attorneys engaged to assist these committees in devising some feasible plan of action and in bringing about desired legislation.

Proper Thing Now Is to Peel Off Soiled Skin

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions should religiously avoid creams, powders and rouges during the heated days. There's no need for them, anyway, since the virtues of macrolized wax have become known. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you've been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off the morning, the complexion never looks like a make-up. Macrolized wax gradually takes off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It has none of the disadvantages of other creams and accomplishes much more in keeping the complexion beautifully white, salty and youthful, free from freckles and other blemishes. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

GIVEN "DOPED" CIGARETTES

NEW YORK, June 25.—Asserting that several soldiers on furlough in New York had been made unconscious by means of "doped" cigarettes and then stripped of their valuables, Lieut. John M. Finnerty of the provost guard last night warned uniformed men to accept cigarettes only from acquaintances or representatives of recognized war work organizations.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) and the Automobile Industry

PROBABLY no existing industry serves such a useful purpose in so many ways as the automobile industry, and certainly no industry has had such a meteoric increase in proportions.

Such an increase would have been impossible of accomplishment if a market for moderate priced cars had not been found and without the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) it would have been impossible to find this market.

When only the rich could afford an automobile the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) had the vision of most everyone driving his own machine.

The Company set out, not to find a way to make gasoline prices higher, but to keep them low in the face of the enormous demands made by the automobilists, which in the average industry would have caused abnormal increases in price.

The efficiency of the Standard Oil Company in making a constantly increasing number of by-products has kept down the price of gasoline and enabled the man of modest means to run an automobile after he got it.

The Standard Oil Company not only makes gasoline to sell at a low price, but to fit the requirements of the modern automobile engine in such a manner as to enable the owner to get out of his car all that the manufacturer designed it to produce.

This is a salient example of the usefulness of the Standard Oil Company not only in contributing to the success of other industries, but in discharging its obligation as a public servant so that all may benefit from its efficiency and by its operations.
