Knollenberg and Haas Suggest "Liberty Bridge" as War Memorial

IN RESPONSE to an appeal from Henry W. Knollenberg, asking for the opinions of citizens on the dedication of the Main street bridge as a memorial for Wayne county men who fought in the World War, Edgar M. Haas, former secretary of the Commercial club, Wednesday morning issued a statement in which he seconded Knollenberg's appeal, and suggested that the bridge be christened "Liberty Bridge."

Interest has been aroused in the project, and the two men wish to invite the statements of other persons of the city and county on the subject.

Haas' Statement.

"The suggestion of Mr. Henry W. Knollenberg, to dedicate the new Main street bridge to the soldiers of Wayne county in the great World War, is a capital idea. This will be an enduring monument to the men who went out and conquered in a great cause.

If the arch is adopted and the other embellishments added, I would suggest that the bridge should be christened 'Liberty Bridge'. Suggestions have been made in the past for a memorial arch to soldiers, but have not borne fruit. The time is now here when the spirit of patriotism is high, and the opportunity present to place this memorial at the most advantageous point as well as at a minimum cost, because there would be no expense for foundations.

"I do not believe that Wayne county could do anything more fitting to honor the heroes of the great war in all history.

"E. M. HAAS.

Following is Knollenberg's statement:

"Much has been said about a suitable memorial to the soldiers and sailors of Wayne county, who were in the great world war. Why not dedicate the new Main street bridge to them?

The bridge was started during the war and has cost an extra amount of money and time because of it. Its size and beauty will make a very appropriate monument, which will endure for a century or more.

"An arch could be erected across one entrance or at the center of the bridge and an appropriate inscription be put thereon. This, too, would be a beauty to the bridge.

If not an arch, then perhaps a tablet or shaft of some kind. The bridge is located at a point where thousands of tourists annually pass and I am sure that more citizens of the city and county will pass over this bridge than will pass any other point in the county.

"The ends of the bridge might be ornamented by placing some of the trophies of war thereon, such as can-

Sealed City Letters Still Two Cents—Never Were One, Says Beck

Several hundred drop letters for the post office yesterday bearing a one-cent stamp. All these letters were returned to the senders with "postage due" on them.

Postmaster Beck reminded inquirers again and again at the postoffice on Wednesday morning that the sealed letters for the city have never been mailed for less or more than two cents since the inauguration of the free mail delivery system in Richmond more than thirty years ago.

"All letters for the city of Richmond not passing through another postoffice, if sealed, go for two cents; if unsealed, for one cent," the postmaster stated for the benefit of people who do not understand that the change in rates only affects mail passing from one postoffice to another.

While the postoffice employees were busy sending back one-cent letters, many three-cent stamped drop letters were also coming into the local office. Even Wednesday a few local and outside letters were coming through with three-cent stamps.

"Hold-ups" on various kinds of advertising letters which are sent in sealed envelopes of this kind, in city "batches" of mail were observed Wednesday. Business firms which usually send out duns on the 31st of the month held them up until the first of this month.

Eleven Cases Decided In Circuit Court In Two Days

Hot weather has little effect on the work of the Wayne circuit court, and the court is busier now than it has been at any time during the present term, according to Judge Bond. Eleven cases appeared before the court, or were decided, during the last two days, establishing a record.

With the exception of probate work which will continue throughout the term, court business is expected to drop off by the last of this month. Only nine cases now pending have been set for trial, although Judge Bond said this morning that more may be added to the trial docket this week. Only one jury trial has been set for this month, that being the damage suit of Walter J. Johnson against Henry Nungesser, which will be tried on July 28.

Judge Bond will go to Connersville next week, where he will try two cases on July 8 and 9. Saturday the court will hear 38 naturalization cases.
