Burns, who has been residing temporarily in Ashland, O., and who is expected to return soon to Eaton to make preparations for his entrance into office.

Half Century of Wedded Life is Celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Polley

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Polley celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home north of Bethel, last week, with more than a hundred guests present—children, grandchildren, brothers, nephews, nieces, cousins, and others who, for the most part, were relatives. Four generations were present: Mr. and Mrs. Polley, Mrs. M. P. Bonham, a daughter; Mr. Wayne Bonham, a son; and Mrs. Polley, Mrs. M. P. Bonham, a daughter; Mr. Wayne Bonham, a son; and Master John Wayne Bonham.

Mrs. Polley came to dinner wearing a cape which had been a part of her wedding gown fifty years ago. Mr. Polley, too, still has the suit and hat that were his wedding clothes. He wore the coat in the afternoon. The couple ate from the plates which they used on their wedding day.

At each plate was found a souvenir booklet, bound with a golden ribbon and a tiny golden bell, and bearing the inscription: J. E. Polley and Matilda Polley, 1869-1919.

After dinner an impromptu program was rendered. Vocal music was furnished by Mrs. A. L. Wiley and Miss Mildred Moore. They sang "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet" together. Miss Moore sang "Daughter of Mine" and Mrs. Wiley sang "The End of a Perfect Day." Miss Moore also sang the popular song, "Till We Meet Again." An interesting feature of the vocal music was an Indian song which Mr. and Mrs. Polley sang, both in the Indian language and in English.

Fred Polley, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Polley, thanked the guests in behalf of his parents. Mr. Polley told of the wedding of fifty years ago, how it occurred in the same house where he now lives, and how he came without his wedding clothes and had to return home for them.

Mr. Polley is seventy-one and Mrs. Polley is sixty-eight, but both are active and have never thought of retiring because of old age. He served in the Civil War, enlisting at 16.

SHOEMAN SAYS COST OF LEATHER DUE TO CATTLE DECREASE

Profiteering is not the biggest cause of the high price of shoe leather, in the opinion of one of the oldest and well known local shoemakers, Tuesday.

"The biggest reason for the steady uphill climb in the price of shoes and leather is the rapid decrease in the number of cattle," said the shoemaker. "This is a result of the cutting up of the big western cattle ranges into small farms, of two to three hundred each."

"No farmer," continued the shoemaker, "will raise cattle on a small farm when hogs can be raised much quicker and with more profit. Then again, the call for leather in the foreign markets, as a result of the war, has tended to shoot the price skyward again."

"In 1914, a year before the war, the Kansas City cattle market showed a decrease of 150,000 head of cattle, compared with 1913. The hides of 150,000 cattle will make practically one million pairs of shoes. And this was only in Kansas City."

Never Low Again.
"If that many less cattle were put on the market there, it can safely be said that the Chicago market, as well as that of several other large cities, was equally as low. Of course the same trust that controls the food supply, the packer's trust, has a monopoly over the leather market, but I don't believe that profiteering has had such a big hand in the price of leather."

"Shoes will never reach their old-time standard of prices," he concluded, "for the simple reason that the supply of cattle is fast diminishing. There is no remedy for this so far as I can see."

Canning Season Failure; Few Fruits are Put Up

Owing to the failure of berry crops and the scarcity of other fruits, and the difficulties that have been experienced in getting sugar, the canning season has been a failure so far, said Elmer Eggemeyer, Tuesday.

Peaches are now on the market but crops in Michigan are only about half what they should be, he said. Generally, the supply was just large enough for immediate consumption throughout the berry season. It is doubtful whether there will be any other fruits for canning this season.
