Herbert Hoover

"An outstanding feature of the candidacy of Herbert Hoover is that he is not a candidate," says the New York Times. "A young political friend who lately suggested his hat for the ring was forcibly and definitely thrust out at the door. When Julius H. Barnes 'nominated' him before the National Dry Goods Association, Wednesday night, he took care that the letter announcing his intention should reach the nominee together with the newspapers reporting the speech. Mr. Hoover's hat is still firm upon his head."

"Even more striking is the fact that Mr. Hoover is a man without a party. The most Mr. Barnes could say was that 'his political affiliations have been with the Progressive-Republicans'. But the Progressive-Republicans are no more an organization; and Mr. Barnes further deepened the uncertainty when he stated that if the Republican party were to 'adopt a non-progressive platform,' and otherwise line up with the Old Guard, it was 'conceivable' that Mr. Hoover might head the Democratic ticket. Mr. Will Irwin, who was Hoover's roommate at Leeland Stanford, gives a similar account. Mr. Hoover's world-wide wanderings as a mining engineer have always prevented him from voting; with the exception of 1896, when he voted for McKinley against Bryan; but Mr. Irwin points out that Hoover has done his best work for the present administration and has loyally supported the president, not only with regard to the league of nations, but also with regard to the famous appeal of 1918 that the nation, regardless of politics, return a Democratic congress. To Mr. Irwin this indicates that Hoover 'could run on either ticket'. Such a record and such an attitude are not likely to allure the practical politicians of either party, whose chief interest centers in maintaining the solidarity and vigor of their organizations. No man is a great man to them who is not also potentially a great political leader."

"The fact remains that Mr. Hoover is thus far the most interesting Presidential possibility with the exception of Leonard Wood. The two characters are, in fact, similar. The brilliant success of General Wood's administration in Cuba, which won world-wide celebrity in its day, stands on an even footing with the Hoover food administration. The far-sighted and practical idealism of the Plattsburg training camp, without which our army must have been very inefficiently officered, is equaled by Hoover's prompt and energetic interposition in behalf of Belgium. Both men have pursued their ideals of patriotic service with an utter disregard of the result to their personal and political fortunes. Of the two, Wood has today the stronger national standing, Hoover the more nearly world-wide celebrity. Brand Whitlock's 'Belgium' enshrines a heroic figure, certain features of which receive further modeling in Maynard Keynes's recent volume, in which Hoover appears in his subsequent European activities."

"This is an era of wide and rapid expansion in our activities as a nation. In the rapidly shifting currents of the time many things would be stranger than that such a man should rise suddenly to power and place. The trouble is that the time has not yet passed when party regularity and merely partisan leadership have ceased to be powerful factors in presidential nominations."

"As for Mr. Hoover's own intention, his conduct thus far indicates that he is willing to wait. He is only forty-five and of independent fortune."

THE GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS DAILY TALK

THINGS THAT LIVE FOREVER

Everything that is useful is beautiful, and everything that is beautiful is eternal in its life.

I stood before the wonderful painting by Rosa Bonheur, "The Horse Show," the other day and I said that if she had not done another thing in her whole life, she had made herself immortal. For she had produced one of the masterpieces of the world—one that will continue to inspire and uplift so long as there is intelligence alive.

No fine thought or generous impulse is ever lost. It winds its life through countless ages, continually being born anew in the lives and efforts of people.

The artist is the one who appreciates—whether the thing be a work of skill or just an act of heart.

Once a beautiful song is sung, its echoes bathe the air forever!

And if it ever comes over you that you are worth little in this world of work and strife, just remember that one splendid act each day is sufficient to make you one of the immortals. Even you may live forever.

Fame and glory are fleeting—but the voice of the heart, the deed in its action, may speak on and on.

The things that make you happy, make others happy. Kindness and nobility sear thru the big world—and, as time goes on—thru dozens and dozens of worlds!

Memories of Old Days

In This Paper Ten Years Ago Today

A committee to investigate the feasibility of running mechanical excursions into Richmond for the purpose of stimulating trade was appointed by the Young Men's Business Club.

Extensive business was the cause of announcement by officials of the American Seeding Machine company that they would erect a new foundry, to employ 140 more moulders, in addition to a new and modern warehouse.

Nearly 200 singers signed up at the first rehearsal for the chorus in the May Musical Festival.

How to Bathe Face to Remove Wrinkles

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the country have been using the saxolite face bath to tone up their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, thus reducing lines and wrinkles. The formula is: Powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolve in witch hazel, one-half pint.

These ingredients are of course perfectly harmless and there is no difficulty in obtaining them at any drug store.

Fred Hoke Address S. S. Meeting in Grace Church

Fred Hoke, prominent Rotarian and Indianapolis manufacturer, addressed the meeting held in Grace M. E. church Sunday afternoon. Mr. Hoke spoke on the Bible, in the home and in business. During his address he brought out the fact that the application of the principles of the teachings of the Bible were essential to a successful business man. Special music by Kent Morse and a solo by Ellsworth Robinson featured the program.

There will be no meeting next Sunday, as the Travelers' Protective association will hold memorial services at the church. It is planned to resume the meetings Sunday, Jan. 26.

FIFTH ST. WOMAN SAYS "I WAS SO NERVOUS THAT I COULD NOT SLEEP GOOD; PEPGEN QUIETED"

"Yes, I was so nervous that I could not sleep good. When I went to bed my nerves would not relax and I often laid for hours before going to sleep," says Mrs. G. W. Baker, 224½ South Fifth street, Richmond.

"I attribute a great deal of this trouble to my stomach because along towards evening gas would form in my stomach. Although I had a great deal of trouble after breakfast and dinner I seemed to have my worst trouble after supper. Of course I ate light suppers, but even then I was in misery. I tried to go without supper entirely but that made me too weak."

"Since I have been taking Pepgen I am able to eat anything I want and I can go to bed with positive assurance that I am going to get a good night's rest."

"I first heard of Pepgen through one of my neighbors who told me how it had helped her."

All the nerves of the human body center in the stomach. Within the stomach lies the great neuromagnetic nerve. All others are its tributaries, and depend upon this powerful storage plant to supply them with nourishment. Nerve weakness almost always begins in the stomach. Pepgen is delicately adapted to the needs of this organ and the stomach naturally hungers for it. Pepgen is a vegetable stomach food and its nutritive properties enable the stomach to supply the blood with building material.

"What's in a Name?"

Facts about your name; its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day and lucky level.

BLANCHE.

There is a large class of feminine names which originated from the complexion. Of these, one of the most popular is Blanche, meaning fair, or white. Its origin, in turn, is from blec, the term by which absence of color is denoted by all tongues in Western Europe. The French word for white is blanche, but the term was not employed as a feminine name in early times except in poetry.

Blach, Balhaus and Blanchard appear in Domesday and indicate the successive steps toward the acceptance of Blanche as a feminine name, but there is no record of her use as such in that worthy historical record. Blanchefleur (white flower) was the name of the mother of Sir Tristram. The first historical Blanche was Blanca of Navarre, the queen of Sancho IV, of Castile. Her grand-daughter, the child of Eleanor Plantagenet, whom King John used as a lure by which to detach Philippe Auguste from the support of Arthur of Brittany, was Blanche of Castille and her popularity passed the name on through the royal family for generations.

It also formed the origin for the term La Reine Blanche for the dowry queen of France, a term also associated with the custom of wearing a wreath of white flowers, inaugurated by Blanche of Castille. The daughter of Edward I was called Blanche in honor of his friendship with her son. Thus the name was firmly established among French and British nobility, as well as in Italy and Spain. France had only the one from Blanche. England preferred the name without the final 'e'. Italy derived the musical Bianca, but Spain preserved the original Blanca, borne by Blanca of Navarre. Portugal slipped an 'r' in place of the 't' and spells it Branca.

Blanche's talismanic stone is the emerald, which insures her protection from evil and promises her great success. If this gem is also her birthstone, she has the augury of a happy marriage. The lawhorne, signifying hope, is her flower. Wednesday is her lucky day and 3 her lucky number.

Dinner Stories

A student had a barrel of ale deposited in his room, contrary, of course, to rule and usage. He received a summons to appear before the President.

"Sir, I am informed that you have a barrel of ale in your room," said the latter.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, what explanation can you make?"

"Why, the fact is, sir, my physician advises me to try a little each day as a tonic, and not wishing to go to the various places where the beverage is retailed, I arranged to have a barrel taken to my room."

"Indeed, and have you derived any

Good Evening

BY ROY K. MOULTON

THEY STAND IT SOMEHOW, THOUGH.

(Adv. in Port Jervis Gazette.)

Miss Hazel Schoonmaker, teacher of piano. Special pains given to beginners.

A girl who seems to be a hustling saleswoman by the way, rushed into John D. Minnick's office the other day and shouted, "Buy New Year cards quick. I throw epileptic fits."

One of the eternal fitness-of-things items in the local prints is to the effect that James Ivory was arrested

"A month ago," continued Mr. Ferguson, "it would have been impossible for me to do the work I am doing today. Five years ago I commenced to have rheumatism in my left shoulder and arm and across my back under the shoulder blade. I kept getting worse until I had to be carried to a hospital where I lay helpless for three weeks. I simply could not move without help. During the past four years I have lost at least eight months from work on account of the rheumatism. Most of the time I could not even lay back in a barber's chair to get shaved, and my left arm was so helpless I could not raise my hand to wash my face. Since leaving the hospital a year ago I have been able to be about part of the time, but a few weeks ago those awful pains started up in my arm and the fear of getting down helped again almost drove me mad. At the time I got Tanlac I was also suffering from stomach trouble and had been for ten years. I distinctly remembered about a year before the rheumatism came on me, of being troubled so with indigestion, spots coming before my eyes, and dizziness that I got alarmed. I could hardly bear to think of eating as the simplest kind of food would sour on my stomach and cause a sickening sensation and intense pains. I even a very light meal my heart would palpitate and act so peculiar that I was afraid I had heart trouble. "I tried all kinds of medicines, had the best treatment, and spent hundreds of dollars in my efforts to get rid of stomach trouble, to say nothing of what I have paid out since the rheumatism struck me, but never got more than a little passing relief. I could see no way out of my troubles until I read a statement for Tanlac a few weeks ago from a man who had suffered with the same kind of troubles. The first bottle gave me a good appetite and as soon as I got so I could eat and digest my food, the pains in my arms and shoulders getting less. I can use my left arm and hand better now than in three years. The other day I tried laying back in the barber's chair and was overjoyed to find that my shoulder did not pain me the least bit. I am eating just good, hearty meals a day and can just feel myself getting stronger all the time. I think anyone who finds relief after suffering as I did ought to be willing, for the sake of others, to tell what it did."

Tanlac is sold in Richmond by Clem Thistlethwaite in Greensboro by C. D. Corine; in Cambridge City by Mr. Dean House; in Pershing by Souther & Rodenberg; in Centerville by Centerville Pharmacy and in Milton by W. L. Parkins.—Adv.

WM. H. FERGUSON COULD NOT RAISE HAND TO HIS FACE
