

Heart and Beauty Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman and have my household duties and small children to care for. I also write poetry and prose.

I would like to earn money from my work and would like to have you advise me just what rules I must follow in order to get some of my work published.

I am poor and my education was limited, but I have talent and my greatest desire is to write poems and stories that will interest children.

I am just learning to use the typewriter.

You will find many helpful suggestions in the "Editor" magazine. It will give you suggestions about preparing your material and the papers which will be most likely to accept it.

Only typewritten matter is considered. It should be written on one side of the paper with ample margins for corrections, and double spaced. If you want the copy returned, send stamps and make the request that they mail it back to you in case it is not used.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a widow of 53 and have two children. I am in love with a country miss of 21. I have known this lady for some time and have been trying to win her, but she tells me we would never be happy on account of our age. What do you think about it?

She goes with me to shows, but I never make love to her, for I know she would not allow it. I am a jealous-hearted fellow and hate to see her with others. She says she does not love me in any way, but likes me as a friend.

What do you think I ought to do about it? GRASS WIDOWER.

Sixteen years is a very great difference in your ages, and since the girl says she does not love you and offers no encouragement, you might just as well give up thought of marriage. You will have to make your own choice of keeping the girl as a friend until she marries some one else, or giving her up now, trying to be happy in the company of some one else.

Don't forget that you had your great adventure when you were married before. It seems to me that the girl is right in wanting a man more nearly her own age and who, like herself, has not been married before.

She Married an Average Man

BY ZOE BECKLEY

I have felt that Mrs. Pardoe has been sizing up and sounding me without seeming to do so while regaling me with the stories of Hammonds Corners folks. Today when she arrived to introduce the people in the little house next to the blacksmith's she made the following prelude:

"I hope you ain't a jealous wife, Mrs. Salsbery," looking archly at me over her sewing.

I kept my eyes on the piece of embroidery in my hands and answered, "Not more than the average, I guess."

"Well, the average wife's a pretty jealous animal," she snapped. "If I was you I'd never give it a thought. It all depends on the man you got. If you've got the philanderin' kind, he'll philander sooner or later, no matter how hard you try to hold him. If you've got the faithful kind you can do anything or be anything, or do nothin' and be nothin', and he will keep on settin' by the fire and callin' you sweetest, and like loses his teeth and can't mumble nothin'."

"But why do you ask if I am jealous? What has that got to do with the house by the blacksmith's?"

"Just this—that Rose Green (she's my half-brother's child) lives in that house, and she's the typewriter and file clerk to the blacksmith's works."

"Oh! And you fear Jim my husband, may grow too much interested? Is she so pretty?"

"Tain't so much her prettiness," answered Agatha Green, "as 'tis her ways. She takes after her pa. Now, if her pa, Nathaniel Rudolph Green, had married Lillian Russell, Sarah Bernhardt, Lady Duff Gordon and Queen Cleopatra all rolled into one, he'd have gone chasin' after some half-baked chorus girl. Nothin' could stop him."

"What's his wife like?" I asked, trying to keep my mind off this chip of the old block, Daughter Rose.

"That's just what I'm gettin' at. Nat Green's wife, Rosamond Shale, she was, is the grandest woman that ever walked on two feet. She was a picture to look at; she was sweet, she was smart, she was good and she was well off. And she worshiped the ground Nat walked on."

"Now if a wife like that can't keep a man from strayin' off like a hound pup I'd like to know who could!"

Mrs. Pardoe compressed her lips and paused, regarding me so fixedly that I had to say something.

"No one could, I guess. It's the nature of some men to stray, as you call it, no matter how faithfully their wives try to hold them."

"There! Now you've said something!" cried Agatha P. with vehemence. "That's my idea. But I would go further. I say it ain't worth any woman's while straining her riggin' to keep a man. The ones that strain their riggin's the hardest and them that don't try at all comes to the

Ouija Board Devotees Weak-Minded, Morons, Says Brain Expert

You'd better tie a can to your ouija board and kiss your favorite spirit control good-bye—unless you want to end up in the psychiatric laboratory struggling desperately to pass the moron test.

Dr. William J. Hickson, director of the world's leading psychopathic laboratory, which is located in Chicago is watching the ouija board craze with a keen professional interest. Dr. Hickson is considering the leading psychopathologist in America.

"We've been getting dozens of spiritualists in here," he explained, "as well as ouija board fans and seance habits. They are, of course, praeoex cases to begin with before they go in for listening to the ghostly rattle the tambourine and watching him spit out the messages from the other world on the ouija board. If they weren't they wouldn't go in for such imbecilities."

"It is not exactly inexplicable—the other world craze. The world is continually full of praeoex victims. A praeoex is a person whose inner desire is to get away from the world of fact, to evade his material responsibilities. He resorts to curious devices for the fulfilling of this ambition. Hallucinations, obsessions and what not seize upon him. The ouija and the seance offer escape."

"The advertising spiritualism has received is slowly turning the attention of all the praeoex victims to it and if it keeps on we will find practically every demented, semi-demented, underdeveloped, and praeoex case in the country talking with the other world."

Mme. Karina, sitting, and her dancers.

Mme. Karina may bring her classic dancers to the United States in the near future, according to reports. The dancers are now music hall favorites in England and on the European continent. They have been on an extensive tour of Europe and have won wonderful success and favor. American managers are now bidding for the services of the dainty misses who are shown above with Mme. Karina. The dances given by the troupe are said to differ from the set ballet dances taught by the Russian artists and have a more general popular appeal for theater goers.

Articles of Rare Beauty and Worth To Be Shown in Art-Craft Exhibit

Articles of beauty such as have not often been viewed in an Indiana exhibit will be displayed in the Richmond public art gallery next Tuesday evening, Feb. 17, when the arts and crafts exhibit will open with a costume party.

The guests will be charming in the dresses of numerous foreign countries, including some imported gowns loaned by Mrs. William Dudley Foulke. Many entry blanks for pieces of arts and craft have been received by the director.

Because it is desired to make the exhibit of special educational merit, great care has been taken in selecting articles from the fields of textiles, which have been considered for their design, decoration and weaving; from sensible and beautiful dresses for the women of today; from pottery and jewelry. Next year house decoration and domestic architecture are to be featured.

With the foreign exhibits practically assured, members of the exhibit committee are turning more anxious eyes toward the local contributions. It is hoped that many interesting things can be borrowed from people of the community.

Several charming old chains of intricate design, some unique hand carved rings and pins already have been offered.

Any one having interesting hand weavings is asked to call Mrs. M. F. Johnston. A Chinese tapestry weaving wall piece, which Mrs. David W. Dennis has just received from China, will be on exhibition. Mrs. Foulke is loaning several Grecian gowns, and a few very handsome necklaces. Charming old chains of intricate design, some uniquely carved rings and pins have been offered. Persons having interesting jewelry are asked to call Emma L. Fetta, 1121.

Local Pottery Show.
Overbeck pottery from the Cambridge City ovens, work from the local pottery classes conducted by Miss Elizabeth Overbeck and 25 pieces of Rockwood pottery from the famous potters of Cincinnati, will be shown. Six pieces of pottery from the Newcomb school in New Orleans are also coming.

Miss Bessie Whitridge will have 25 pieces of hand painted china which will be exhibited; also some handsome needle work by Miss Elizabeth Jay.

Miss Elmina Kempton will exhibit some base reliefs in plaster and several lamp shades.

Among foreign exhibits the William Baumgarten company of New York City is sending four handwoven tapestries of considerable size, listed as "Boucher, Pastoral," "Louis XV. Can-tonniere," "Sixteenth Century Chair-back" and a "Copy of a Sixteenth Century Fraktur."

The Edgewater company of New York is sending a full sized duplicate of a modern tapestry woven on the Edgewater looms for a Brooklyn church.

Foulke Collection Shown.
From the famous Charles Foulke collection of tapestries in Washington, D. C., loaned through the kindness of Mrs. Foulke at the solicitation of Mrs. William Dudley Foulke, are coming some of the most valuable tapestries of the country.

Entry blanks have been received from New York batik makers for 30 pieces. A young Michigan woman is showing some of particular beauty. Miss Emilie Maue's classes at the high school will have some fine work.

Batik is Picturesque.
Eighteen years ago Stephen Myrick then a missionary to the east, exhibit ed an original Java batik in the Richmond art exhibit, in the high school. It was the first to be seen here. Java is the native home of the batik method of painting and dying. Cracked wax effects are magnificently exhibited in the local showing. The articles to be shown range in value from a $10 pillow cover to a $200 wall hanging. Textile design and weaving will be illustrated by exhibits from the Heron Art Institute, in Indianapolis, by Miss Francesco de Capdevilla of New York; by the Allandand Industries of North Carolina and others.

Next! Laundry Prices Latest to Take Climb

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Scarcity of labor and high wages are responsible for increased laundry prices in Chicago, announced R. O. Larson, president of the Laundry Owners' association. "Although we are paying three times what we did in 1914 for help, we can't get it," he said.

The price of family washings was increased two cents a pound; collars from four to six cents; men's shirts from 15c to 20 cents, and silk shirts from 25 to 30 cents.

Miami Frosh Get Saucy On Upper Classmen Edict

OXFORD, O., Feb. 12.—The student's council of Miami University, yesterday called six freshmen to task for failing to wear their freshman caps. One freshman is said to have stated that he had bought three freshman caps and all had been stolen from him. He said he came to Oxford to get an education, and not to today to a bunch of upper classmen.

"I was under orders in the army for two years before I entered Miami," he said, "and I got enough of it. I am here to study, not to play with you bunch of kids."

The chairman of the council said the organization would see that the freshman had another cap; that one would be purchased for him, and he would be purchased for him.

"You can purchase and be d—," replied the freshman. "I won't wear it."

Several of the other freshmen gave the august upper classmen to understand that they would use their own sweet pleasure as to whether kind of headgear they wore during their freshman days at college.

It is stated that the matter will be brought to the attention of President Hughes, but whether that will do any good is doubtful.
