

LOCAL DIVISION'S PLACE IN PENNSY GROUPING DOUBTFUL

Officials of the Richmond division of the Pennsylvania are of the opinion that E. B. McCabe mentioned in dispatch from Philadelphia printed elsewhere in this edition should have been E. B. Taylor. Mr. McCabe is not head of the finance and accounts.

There is some speculation on the part of officials here as to what changes will be made in the division when the changes in the Pennsylvania system, announced recently by Samuel Rea, president of the company become effective.

In the announcement made by President Rea, no northern boundary is made for the southwest region. The southwest region, under that region, is bounded by St. Louis, Columbus and Cincinnati. The northwest region is comprised of the lines from Columbus to Chicago by way of Crestline, O. Under this grouping, no provision is made for that part of the Richmond division, north of this city, for the G. R. and L. from Richmond to Fort Wayne, or for the line from Bradford, O., to Chicago, by way of Logansport.

Officials here are of the opinion that these lines will be included in the southwest region, although no instructions concerning the proposed change has been received at the offices of the Richmond division.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 13.—The working men of the country refuse to be "political jacksasses of the corporations," declared Frank J. Esper, at Chicago, secretary of the National Labor party, in an address before several hundred delegates to a convention called here today to organize a state labor party. The convention was called by the Indiana State Federation of Labor.

"We are here," said Mr. Esper, "because we know there's something wrong within the construction and makeup of our society. We desire to help build a political organization that will be beneficial to ourselves, to our homes. We are here because the word 'Democrat' or 'Republican' has become stench in the nostrils of the real respectable Americans of today."

There were 317 delegates registered when the convention opened.

A permanent organization was to be formed later in the day. Mr. Esper asserted that the steel corporation and mine owners have been "the pets and favorites of the administration." He decried the use of the injunction in labor disputes.

When the delegates reconvened this afternoon they lined up for the fight for chairmanship of the party. Francis J. Dillon, Indianapolis, and John Mogg, chairman of the federal labor party, are the candidates.

Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, speaking at a luncheon at the Republican Women's City Committee here. Hays announced his disapproval of the League of Women Voters, which has been summoned to take the place of the Women's Suffrage League.

"A woman belonging to this league," he said, "would be like a pea in a silo. She would be rattled around with no objective. Women should affiliate with one of the big political parties and work some definite aim. They are not to be separated or segregated, but assimilated and amalgamated.

Their rights of participation in management of affairs of the Republican party must be equally sacred and sacredly equal to those of men."
