

BIGGER REVENUES FOR SCHOOLS SEEN BY SUPT. HINES

County Superintendent Williams, on his return from Cleveland, is expected to prepare a detailed statement of county school needs, for submission to L. N. Hines, state superintendent of public instruction.

Assurance that the state tax board will approve increased expenditures for school purposes, including salary increases for teachers, has been given by Mr. Hines in a letter to county superintendents throughout the state. The suggested wage scale for teachers, prepared some time ago by Mr. Hines, has been approved by members of the tax board, the letter says. Mr. Hines urges school officials to prepare full statements as to their needs.

Conditions Brought. The state superintendent was spurred to prepare a clear statement as to conditions affecting schools by receipt of many letters from various county and township officials, asking about the attitude of the tax board on school levies.

Superintendent Hines' statement on school levies is as follows: "I have been authorized to issue the following statement as representing the attitude of the board toward school tax rates and school revenues for the ensuing year."

"The state tax board will endeavor to meet the school situation for the next year in the light of conditions existing at that time. That will mean, of course, increased revenues for the schools."

As a Woman Thinketh

BY HELEN ROWLAND

THE MAN OF IT
Of course, woman has always been the human paradox.

The baffling, incomprehensible, inscrutable riddle of the species! And yet—here are just a few things that every woman would like to know about a man!

Can anybody tell—
Why he always leaves a tea-cup, a vase, a priceless piece of bric-a-brac, and even his favorite meerschaum on the exact edge of a table?

Why he will spend three-quarters of a perfect day looking for something that he has secreted "for safe-keeping" and the other quarter trying to prove that he didn't put it there?

Why it annoys him to be called a "saint," bores him to be called a "good man," but delights and flatters him to be called a "devil"?

Why he can remember the exact date on which he caught a certain six-pound bass, and the precise minute, hour and year, on which he made the last hole with a certain marvelous stroke—yet cannot for the life of him carry the date of his wedding anniversary in his head for twelve whole months?

Why he will run away from a woman he loves, for fear of becoming entangled—and run after a woman he doesn't love, until she trips him up and marries him?

Why he would rather drop his cigar ashes on the prayer rug, in the baby's milk, behind the piano, on the sensitive-plant, in his coffee cup—or anywhere on earth—than into the ash-tray at his elbow?

Why he will work like a demon for six months in order to pay off a debt, and then stick the check in his pocket and forget to mail it for a whole week?

Why he will forgive a woman for making a fool of herself over any man on earth—except himself?

Why he considers that before marriage a woman's love must be cultivated and cherished like an orchid—but that after marriage it will flourish like an air-plant on her own imagination?

Why he will nonchalantly pass over one nice girl after another, who might make him perfectly happy—and marry the first one who demonstrates the power to make him suffer?

Why he will cheerfully pay the price of gasoline—yet wait to heaven that his wife is running him when she throws out one of his frayed cravats or the remains of his favorite shoes?

Why he will marry a girl for her "adorable little hands" and expect her to use them for peeling potatoes? Or for her splendid mind, and expect her to concentrate it on a bread-putting? Or for her brilliant conversation, and expect her to use it all up before he comes home evenings?

Why he will slave for a woman, suffer for her, die for her—do anything on earth for her, except come home in time for dinner, go to bed at a reasonable hour, and be pleasant at breakfast when that's all in the world she needs in order to make her perfectly happy?

Why he will go to the ends of the earth to prove his love for a woman—and yet bite his tongue out before he will tell her how much he loves her?

Why—but, oh well!
That's just the man of it!

What's in a Name

(Copyright)

DORIS

Though etymologists do not directly connect Doris with Dorothy, and some believe that she is merely a modern version of a feminine fancy for a name, a trifle out of the ordinary, it is impossible to believe that her source was not identical with Dorothy and that strange but correct reversal Theodora. Such being the case, Doris comes from one of the early Christian Greek names, notably Thekla. St. Thekla was said to have been a disciple of St. Paul and to have been exposed to lions at Antioch. Instead of tearing her to pieces, they crouched at her feet, but nevertheless she was considered the first virgin martyr, and no higher praise is possible for a woman than to compare her to St. Thekla.

From Thekla came the French Thecla and then, through the Eastern Church, Theodora, signifying "divine gift," and, much later, the incorrect Dorothy.

There have been two St. Theodoras, one a virgin martyr and the other a Greek Empress.

Massinger composed a drama dealing with the story of St. Theodora, the Cappadocian maiden who sent the roses of paradise by angelic hands as testimony of the joys of heaven. It is needless to go into the growth of Dorothy, followed by Dorothy, Dolly, Dora and Dorinda. Her contractions, elaborations and diminutives are legion, but unfortunately history does not record what first enterprising mother named her baby Doris, though the name is almost as popular as Dorothy in England and America. Even Germany uses it. France alone finds it too harsh for her tongue and prefers the softer, Dorothee and Dorothe.

The talismanic stone assigned to Doris is the agate, which gives her courage, guards her from danger and is also said to be a cure for insanity if worn as a pendant around the throat.

Friday is Doris' lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

Dr. House May Read Present and Past Today; Talks on Building Faith

"Nobody in the world can read your future," it is possible to read the past and present, and I may do some of that Thursday night, but mediums and palmists who pretend to foretell the future are the evil cause of a great part of the worry in this world," said Dr. L. E. House, in his third evening lecture in the Reid Memorial church Tuesday. His subject was "The Builders and Destroyers of Faith."

Worry, fear, fretting, malice, jealousy, criticism or gossip and unbridled passion were named by the speaker as the "great destroyers of health," while he named love, faith, hope, cheerfulness, kindness and grace of God, as the "great constructors of health."

"There are many people today who are being murdered by the slander and cruelty of their fellows. Your judgement to others reflects the kind of person you are yourself. Criticism is a terrible thing in America. People are being killed by it. You see it in the churches, in society, among ministers, lawyers and especially in the medical world. And people are going down under it every day. Let us be careful of our tongues, for if we are we shall have better bodies and better and healthier lives," he said.

Wednesday at 3 p. m. Dr. House will speak on "The Power of Affirmation," and Wednesday night on "The Psychology of Prayer." The lectures are being given in the Reid Memorial church.

HERE THEY ARE, GRANDFATHER'S GOLOSHES, NEWEST THING IN FEMINE FOOTWEAR

Trio of pretty co-eds of Chicago University wearing goloshes like grandfather used to wear.

Those people who like to gaze upon a dainty, neatly clad silken ankle have been deprived of that pleasure this winter because of the new and universally popular fad for goloshes. Jack Frost has also been dealt a blow since all the fair maids have taken to wearing exact duplicates of grandfather's overshoes, popular some fifty years ago. The most fashionable method of wearing the ugly but practical things is to leave the clasps open so they flap and clank with a smart, careless air.
