

NEW AMBASSADOR TO U. S. SPEAKS AT THE AMERICAN CLUB

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, March 12.—Sir Auckland Geddes, the newly appointed ambassador to the United States, made his first speech today since his appointment was announced, addressing a large gathering in his honor at the American luncheon club. The American ambassador, John W. Davis, presided at the luncheon and introduced the British ambassador, who was warmly received.

While avoiding political topics, Sir Auckland spoke of the characteristics of the American and English people, and the essentials binding them together. Referring to the phrases, "Our American Cousins," and "Blood is thicker than water," the ambassador said he felt at first that he was dealing with a great civilization which seemed different from all he had met, until "the crust was broken and I found myself among people I understand." He continued:

Recognize a Cure
"The cure for such ills as exist, is, I am sure, frankly to recognize that the common language is at once a bond and a barrier, and to work to strengthen its binding power and weaken its separating influence. It can be done, but it is not the work of a day or a year."

"The Englishman who saw his best girl off with an American soldier or sailor is going to continue braying that he dislikes Americans, which is not what he really means at all. What he really means is: 'I dislike seeing my girl take any notice of another male.'"

"One result of the war has been to multiply the possibilities of such individual misunderstandings. What we all want more consciously to realize is that nations cannot be judged by a few chance specimens of their citizens. They must be judged by the expression of their collective will, made manifest in hours of crisis. Judge Britain by her action as a nation during the war, during, if you will, one month of the year April, 1918, and I think no Briton or friend of Britain need be ashamed of his citizenship or his friendship."

New York Motorists Fear Shortage of Motor Gas

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, March 12.—Possibility of an oil shortage which would deprive New York city of its gas supply has caused Public Service Commissioner Nixon to call a meeting here next Tuesday of representatives of oil and gas companies to discuss the situation. This action was taken after the commission had been notified by the New York and Richmond gas company that it was unable to renew its contract for gas oil which expires March 31, and that without the oil it would be unable to continue service.

"The difficulty of getting gas oil is getting to be a serious concern to all gas companies in this city," Mr. Nixon said. "Some have contracts expiring in April and June, and only a few have succeeded in renewing them."

The scarcity was attributed to increasing use of the fuel by the navy and business concerns, by a representative of the Consolidated Gas company, who declared that the price of gas oil has increased from three or four cents a gallon.

I have been working around here for four months and haven't saved a dollar nor had what you could call a good time. I have been lonesome and I miss all of my old shipmates. I was on the President Lincoln when a German submarine got her and was twelve hours on a life raft before a destroyer picked us up. I had hard work and long hours during the war, but I also had real shipmates and good times and was able to lay aside a few dollars every month, so I want to go back."
