H. S. Orchestra Does Well in Appearance

By EMMA L. FETTA

Before a representative and interested audience, the high school orchestra appeared under the baton of Ralph C. Sloane in a highly effective program Tuesday night, in the high school auditorium.

Proceeds from the concert will go to the three French orphans adopted by the orchestra three years ago, for a period of three years. Additional funds will pay for the orchestra pins annually awarded.

The program was particularly well arranged. From the large practice repertoire had been chosen some of the most charming lesser classics.

Three Compositions Praiseworthy
Three short compositions, "Wandering," by Atherton, "A Japanese Sunset," by Depper, and "A Love Song," by Gruenwald were best done. The latter was perhaps the most smoothly done of any on the program. Extreme good continuity of tone was evident in "Wandering."

Gruenwald's "Parade of Dolls" was delightfully done as was Suppe's "La Burlesque," although this latter was marked by a slight loss of entente playing.

The high school orchestra is not an aggregation of children playing for their own temporary amusement. They are sincerely desirous of the best in their musical appearance. With the Garfield and other junior orchestras behind them as an early training ground, it is not surprising that they are able to accomplish what they have in the ensemble music department. Ralph Sloane, director, is to be congratulated on the success of his charges.

Special Appearance Pleases.
Worthy comment were the three special appearances of the evening. Miss Mary Jones and F. K. Hicks did extremely well in Bach's remarkable "Concert for Two Violins." Elmer Hurrell, a pupil of the late Ernest Renk, showed tone perfection and fingerling skill in his corner solo, "Concert Polka," by Bagley. The Earhart male quartette, composed of Cyril Pitts, Samuel L. Garton, Paul Edwards and Russell Thornburgh were received enthusiastically and recalled several times. Their program included the charming "Lass o'Mine," by Maley.

City Ideal for Gardening, Work Should Go On

Spring and summer gardening in Richmond has many chances to prosper, according to E. F. Murphy, county agent, and former city garden supervisor, Wednesday.

"In towns below 25,000 population gardening was dropped when the war ended with few exceptions," said Murphy. "In towns of 25,000 to 50,000 population, gardening is done only to the extent that school officials feel necessary.

"In cities above 50,000 population, where children are apt to be idle on the streets, there are but few places where one finds gardening dropped," he continued. "In these cities it has been recognized that gardening furnishes useful employment.

"From my observations in more than over 370 cities I would judge that Richmond is an ideal city for gardening program.

"The number of Richmond children participating in garden work during the war; the size of the city; the fact that it is easy to get garden plots in Richmond, when compared with larger cities, and the commendable spirit
