

MRS. TOWNSEND HAS $4,000 AS RESULT OF CLEAN UP OFFERING

By WILLIAM R. SANBORN
With the rain falling in sheets the crowd began to gather early. It wasn't a day to expect so many to turn out to attend a farm sale, but they were there nevertheless, from all the countryside, friends and neighbors of many years. The sale was held on the late Jesse H. Townsend farm, on Tuesday, for the benefit of his widow and for the settlement of the estate, and was conducted by Charles G. Townsend, the administrator.

The Townsend farm is located 2 1/2 miles northwest of Middleboro, and the same distance southwest of White-water. Mrs. Townsend will rent the acreage but will remain in her home and no furniture was disposed of. Many ladies were present, the house being thronged all day long.

The Ladies' Aid of the Whitewater Christian church, as members supposed, amply supplied with lunch, but after clearing a profit of $44, and disposing of 300 sandwiches and other good things, found there was a demand for more, at the close of the sale.

A Satisfactory Sale.
Ten head of cattle, mostly young stuff, 30 head of hogs and 3 horses, comprised the live stock. About 500 bushels of corn averaged $1.53 and five tons of fine clover hay brought the record price of $36 per ton. A cow with calf at side cost Amos Hollinger $82 and Everett Reid paid $40 each for a few yearling sows, of which there were 23 in the sale.

Implement sold at good prices as to condition and the almost new auto trailer was bid up to $50 by Roy Roberts. Mrs. Townsend says the sale was very satisfactory, and that in many instances the prices bid were higher than she had anticipated. Colonel Tom Conniff and Omer Platt cried the sale, while Francis McMin and Omar Coffman, of the Dickinson Trust company, made the settlements. They report receipts totaling $4,000.

The Farm and the Farmer

By William R. Sanborn

A county having more than 3,000,000 people organized a farm bureau with 250 members on Monday, March 15. What county? Oh, Cook County, Ill., and the meeting was held at the La Salle hotel in Chicago. The by-laws provide that "all members shall be bona fide farmers, excepting the treasurer." Why the exception, do you suppose?

"We raise very few sheep out this way and so have lambs to lose, but there is complaint of loss of spring pigs," said Thomas Constable, of Bethel. "One farmer tells me that he has lost half of his spring pigs, and others who have dropped in say they are also short a number. The only other complaints that I have heard is the low average winter price on hogs and the shortage of good farm help."

Some of our farmers think that summer hog prices will be higher, others say they are no show for better prices, because Europe isn't buying much of our meat. From what talk I have heard rather think we shall raise fewer hogs this year. Mr. Constable, who is a garage owner, says he hopes to sell a few cars this year but has not yet booked an order. He sold some cars last year through Richmond concerns.

Toughest Spring on Stock.
"Farmers have had lots of bad luck with both spring pigs and lambs down our way. This, in fact, has been the worst spring, that is the hardest on young stock in all my recollection." This was the comment of E. W. Hunt, of Abington township. "This means that we shall hardly raise as many hogs this year as common; they are not here to feed."

Mr. Hunt says that owing to inability to get help he has rented his farm. It is his idea that if everything else stays up, especially feeds, hogs must go higher or there will be less feeding done, everywhere, until a shortage in meats develops and we feel the pinch of still higher prices for hog products; possibly also for beef; cattle being on the bargain table just now, comparatively speaking.

A Drive for Members.
"The farm bureau folks have held no meetings lately, but are now planning for a drive, both in the county as a whole, and by special township workers and organizations, under a state plan," said Forest LaMar, of Liberty. "Union county farmers are pretty well organized now, for that matter, more than 50 per cent of them being already enrolled. As to our next crop of hogs that may be cut down slightly, there have been more than ordinary loss of spring pigs, and the effect of low market prices may check feeding operations in a degree."

"So far as I can judge a full acreage of corn will be planted and my idea is that most of our farmers will plant all the land they can handle. As to farm improvements can't say. The farmer faces a hard problem when it comes to new barns or homes. The high cost of material and the cost and scarcity of good carpenters, have to be reckoned with."

Are Gathering Them In.
"We have 135 to 140 members out of

The Diary of an Engaged Girl

By Phyllis Phillips

I have made two great discoveries this evening. My "old maid" Aunt Cecilia is young—and beautiful!

When I came home from the party tonight, Aunt Cecilia was sitting up waiting for me. She wasn't a bit sleepy, and seemed sort of anxious to talk with me. I told her all about Mr. and Mrs. Ted, and how wonderful their studio was and all about the lovely smock that Mrs. Ted wore, and everything. Her eyes just sparkled at my description, and she squeezed my hand once and said I was so like her self.

Then she asked me if I really was interested in my paintings or whether it was just a passing fancy with me.

I told her how I felt about that and many other things that have been on my mind for ever so long. Somehow or other I can talk to Aunt Cecilia better than anyone else. She understands me so well. She's never pecky or critical.

When I told her that I sometimes felt that nineteen was awful young to undertake a home and husband and that I felt that I just must try my wings first and all that sort of thing she took a long breath and hugged me awful hard.

Then she asked me if I'd like to hear a story about another girl who had gone through the same feelings, and of course I said yes.

What a wonderful romance it was, all about a girl who was beautiful and very young, and talented. This girl also wanted to be an artist, and just like little me, she met a young man and fell in love with him, and soon after they were engaged. But that foolish girl was not content with her lot, and asked to try her wings too, and paint, and see the world. She was terrified at the thought of suddenly growing up and becoming the mistress of a house just when she wanted to dream and play for ever so long before leaping into the dark.

One day she told her lover of how she felt and he was very silent. Several days later, as she was in her studio painting, he came in. She was painting a young man model, and her fiancé's face went white when he saw how free and easy the scene was and now his fiancé was absorbed in her work—hardly nodding to him when he appeared.

When she had finished and dismissed the model he took her face in his hands and asked her if her work would always mean so very much to her after they were married. She kissed him and then told him that sometimes it seemed as if her work were the very breath of her nostrils. She was happiest when painting.

Then he explained how he felt about their future and how he had always dreamed of a home and wife. Last of all he told her that he had been given a big task out in South America, something about building a most important railroad. He was an engineer. He asked her whether she would be ready to marry him right away and go down to Peru with him and be his helpmate.

That poor girl was fairly frightened to death at the thought of so sudden a change and somehow or other, before they were through they had words.

It ended in his leaving for Peru—alone and broken hearted. The girl stayed behind and felt sure that she had chosen rightly. But not long afterwards she discovered that when he went out of her life her talent had gone with him. She never painted again.

Like many girls, whose pride means more than their happiness to them, she never wrote to him to explain her change of mind and he passed out of her life completely. Occasionally she heard of his wanderings—here and there he never returned to the States. And he never married.

Neither did the girl. Imagine my surprise when Aunt Cecilia looked over at me with a wistful expression in her eyes and said: "Lindsey, dear, I was that girl!" (To be continued.)

What's in a Name

(Copyright)

REBECCA.
Facts about your name; its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

Of good old Biblical stock is Rebecca, which is translated "noosed cord." It is said to come from the Hebrew word rabak—least that was the origin of the first Rebecca, a name which seems to have been coined especially to be bestowed upon the wife of Isaac, of Biblical fame.

The Rebeccas of the world should make excellent wives, since the word Rabika, a later rendition of rabak, which means a cord with a noose, is given to convey the firmness of the marriage bond. The Septuagint and the Latin both give evidence of the name Rebecca in very early times. Another version, said to be the authorized one, makes Rebecca. This latter form seems to be the one affected today by every young miss who is called by the name of the good old Biblical heroine.

Despite the religious significance which history has given to the name, Rebecca has been a great favorite with writers, who have employed her in more or less frivolous romances. Two Rebeccas who will never be forgotten by present-day readers are the "Becky" Sharp of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair" and the charmingly quaint little "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" which is endeared to the hearts of American admirers of Kate Douglas Wiggin.

The bloodstone is Rebecca's talismanic gem. It has the power to guard its wearer from all dangers and preserve her bodily health, and secure her consideration and respect. Moreover it is said to guard her from deception, especially of her lover. Sunday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number. The violet, signifying modesty, is her flower.

If the crust of the earth were level there would be one great ocean two miles deep.

Have Curly, Wavy Hair Like "Nature's Own"

Women who have trouble keeping their hair in curl, or of securing the desired wave effect—and especially those who realize the harm that the hot iron does to the hair—will do well to try the new Silmerine method. In no other way can they acquire such pretty waves and curls, having all the appearance of "Nature's own." And the hair, instead of being singed, ragged or dead-looking, has such a lively lustre and wholesome beauty. The curliness is more quickly acquired than when a waving iron is used, and it lasts considerably longer. When the hair is combed out it is nice and fluffy. The hair will be quite manageable, no matter in what fashion it is to be done up.

If one will get a bottle of plain liquid silmerine at any drug store and follow the accompanying directions, she will be simply delighted with the result. This product is of course perfectly harmless and there is nothing sticky, greasy or unpleasant about it. It is also prized as a splendid dressing for the hair. As so small a quantity is required at a time, a few ounces will last for months.—Advertisement.

DR. RICHARDS' WORDS SHOW WHY TRUTONA OVERCOMES BAD AFTER-EFFECT OF "FLU"

"An Appetizer, System Builder, Strengtheners and Real Nerve Tonic," Prominent Physician Declares of Perfect Preparation—What All "Flu" Victims Need.

"As an appetizer, strengthener, system builder and real nerve tonic, I can heartily recommend and commend Trutona."

Dr. J. Richards, the prominent Tennessee physician, in making the foregoing statement, has really pronounced Trutona a remarkable treatment for overcoming serious after-effects of influenza, pneumonia and the like.

Victims of these dreaded winter maladies, after "recovering" from an attack, almost invariably find themselves possessed of little or no appetite and their systems in a dreadfully weakened run-down and nervous state. Considering Dr. Richards' words it is easy to understand why Trutona has proved such a remarkable remedy for overcoming these bad after-effects. "An appetizer, strengthener, system builder and real nerve tonic"—these are the qualifications that have won for Trutona the unstinted praise of thousands of unfortunate influenza and pneumonia victims who have regained their health through the Perfect Tonic.

"What Others Say"
Mike Hamilton, a traction company employe and well-known Terre Haute,

Ind., man who lives at 418 South Pearl Street, enthusiastically praising the reconstructive powers of Trutona, says:

"I can hardly realize how much good Trutona's done for me in ridding my system of the after-effects of influenza. I certainly feel different nowadays and I can highly recommend Trutona, especially as an after-the-flu medicine."

Harry Lee, 1661 Gallagher street, Louisville, Ky., a sufferer from the after-effects of pneumonia, says: "I've gained twenty-eight pounds and feel fine now—just like a new man, since taking Trutona," all of which is surely conclusive proof of Trutona's merit.

"I've found Trutona to be very efficient in overcoming after-effects of influenza," declares Mr. Iva Gates, a well-known Peru, Ind., woman of 155 Canal Street.

There are scores of other similar statements and they prove conclusively that there is no better preparation for the treatment of after-effects of pneumonia, influenza, deep colds and the like than Trutona, the Perfect Tonic.

Trutona is sold in Richmond at Clem Thistlethwaite's Drug Store.—Advertisement.

Heart and Beauty Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 15 years of age. I have been going with a boy of about the same age. We kept steady company until he came to see me one evening. When he left that night he was just the same as usual.

The next evening when asked to come to see me he refused and said he did not care for me. Do you think he has grown tired of me? I like him and would like to keep his friendship. What do you think I should do? I have written to him several times since then, but he ignores my mail.

Do you think he has lost all interest in me? I know he cared a great deal for me although he did not tell me. His actions spoke louder than words. Please tell me your opinion of a boy like that.

PUSSY-WILLOW.

The boy did nothing out of the way. He ceased to enjoy your company and so he broke away. You made your mistake by asking him to come to see you and by writing him letters when he did not write to you. In the future let young men ask to come to see you. They will do so without your urging. They will like you less if they think you are running after them.

There is nothing you can do to regain the friendship of this boy. At the age of fifteen it would be wise to forget about boys and enjoy study, reading and girls.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man 20 years of age. I have two girl friends both just my age. One of the girls I go with regularly and the other occasionally.

The one I go with occasionally treats me as a good friend only. The more I see of her the more I love her.

The more I see of the girl I am with often, the more I seem to dislike her. She is just the opposite; the more she sees of me, the more she seems to love me. She has been that way ever since we first met. It is genuine love she gives me, too, none of this soft kind of love. She knows quite a few men, but doesn't seem to care for any of them except me. Her parents say she never cared for any other man. I enjoy being with her, but in some way I just can't return the love she gives me. Please understand she isn't so affectionate with every one—just me. I find when it is impossible for me to see her very often I get very anxious about her. She is a good girl, modest and good-looking. I want to treat her as a sister. I would do anything for her, but I can't return her love. I want to give it to my other friend whom I see only occasionally. I want to give the little girl a square deal, and so please advise me what to do.

BLUE EYED BILL.

It seems to me that the kindest thing you can do is to tell the girl the truth. Say that you regard her as a dear sister and cannot love her in the way you should to accept her love. She will be hurt, of course, but in the end she will be happier because she knows the truth.
