

RED CROSS MUST GO ON WITH FIGHT, SAYS H. DAVIDSON, HEAD

PARIS, March 25.—Henry P. Davison, New York banker and head of the American Red Cross, said:

"No matter how many treaties are signed or not signed, world peace will remain unestablished until central Europe and the near east are cleansed and disinfected."

"Ninety-nine per cent of the inhabitants of the world do not care about the signature or ratification of treaties, but care immensely for their safety from the scourges now sweeping Eastern Europe and Asia and which constitute the mightiest danger to all humanity since the deluge."

"America is as unsafe as Europe from typhus and the white plague now spreading with lightning rapidity."

"Two millions and three hundred thousand infected Russian refugees are pressing against Western Europe's borders in their mad rush westward, in the hope of escaping death under the most horrible conditions."

"A ship carrying two full-fledged generals, seven brigadier generals, 24 colonels and 700 troops from Russia now is roving the Mediterranean, rejected at every port like a hopeless pilgrim unable to land her infected cargo. The ultimate fate of this modern phantom ship cannot be fore told."

Death Rate Exceeds War's.

"Conditions as bad as in Russia prevail in Hungary, Siberia, Austria, Montenegro, Turkey and Syria, and throughout the Near East. Poland especially is stricken."

"More persons are dying daily now than during the war."

"Whole populations are being destroyed. The germs pass from one country to another, owing to the lack of sanitary devices. American, British and Italian Red Cross organizations are doing their best, but it is impossible to combat this immense danger by private means."

"It is a matter to be handled by Governments. They handled the war, and this is worse than war."

"Unless quick relief is provided the world will see a tragedy greater than that of the last five years. Montenegro, for instance, with its population of 430,000, has only four doctors, no hospital supplies and no medicines. The same applies to the whole of Eastern Europe."

ORA CLINE FOUND GUILTY

RUSHVILLE, Ind., March 25.—Ora Cline was found guilty by a jury Wednesday afternoon of a charge of encouraging delinquency of the 19-year-old daughter of Walter Smith, and was sentenced to 120 days in the county jail and fined $50. He immediately filed a motion for a new trial.

A VITAL FACTOR

"It is natural for a growing child to crave what may seem an overabundance of food. The vital, important factor is to assure not only a plenitude of food but food that contains those substances that promote healthful growth."

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is daily helping to nourish and strengthen many boys and girls through the trying period of growth.

You should not hesitate to give SCOTT'S EMULSION to a child of any age.

The exclusive grade of cod-liver oil used in Scott's Emulsion is the famous S. & B. Process, made in Norway and refined in our own American Laboratories. It is a guarantee of purity and palatability unsurpassed.

Scott & Bowes, Bloomfield, N. J.

19-23

Indiana Brevities

SOUTH BEND—Returning acts of kindness by death dealing blows, with a stove poker, Joseph Wasoski, a tramp, assaulted Mrs. Lambert Mathys living near here, and inflicted injuries which will probably prove fatal. He was later arrested.

RICHMOND.

The educational film, "Birth," which was to have appeared at the Richmond theatre March 28, 29 and 30, has been cancelled because the manager, who travels with the show, was called to California by the serious illness of his mother. The film "Birth" will be brought to Richmond some time in the near future if arrangements can be made. Mr. Mills, manager of the Richmond, has secured in place of "Birth," Douglas Fairbanks, in "His Majesty, the American," which will be shown Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, March 28, 29 and 30.

MURRETTE.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes

MURRAY.

It is very seldom an act "stops the show," but this is what Rich and Lenore did last night on the new bill which opened yesterday at the Murray for the last half. Both have the knack of putting over a song and when they sing "Shall I Hesitate," a blues song with a guitar and a piano-accordion accompaniment, they make it impossible for the succeeding act to come on. Both have class, and their act is full of entertainment. Adams and Guhl are two blackface comedians who create gales of laughter through the explanation of the workings of an insurance policy, and the word "equivalent." Then comes