Billingsville Comes Near Destruction by Flames

Billingsville, a small village five miles south of Liberty, came near being totally destroyed by fire Monday afternoon. The fire which started from some unknown cause in one of the dwelling houses was carried by the high wind and rapidly spread over the hamlet. In a very short time the flames had involved four of the homes and some other buildings.

The people of the surrounding country as well as all the men, women and children of the threatened town turned out to fight the fire and were able to keep the flames in check, while Liberty and College Corner having received the call for help were speeding with their chemical trucks to their assistance.

After the use of the chemicals and a hard fight the flames were brought under control, but not without a heavy loss.

Conservation Department to Count Wild Life Noses

A census of the members of the wild life of the state will be taken, a letter received by John F. Holaday, secretary of the Wayne County Fish and Game Protective Society, Wednesday, George N. Mannfield, superintendent of fish and game of the state conservation department.

In the letter Mannfield proposes, through the co-operation of sportsmen in the state, to secure an approximate estimate of the amount of fish and game remaining. The letter in part:

"Future hunting and fishing will depend largely on the ability of the department to create and foster public sentiment in favor of fish and game laws. It must be remembered that laws are but the crystallized expression of public opinion. If there be no public opinion favoring a law, or if merely placing a legislative act on the statute book will not bring results.

The summer tanager is a forest-loving bird, and has some of the characteristics of the fly-catchers. In his "Birds of Illinois" Dr. Robert Ridgway says that their food consists to a great extent of hornets, wasps and bees, and because on this they are sometimes called the "red bee bird."

In several instances the stomachs have been found entirely filled with the broken remains of bumble bees.
