

PENN'S GRAVE TO BE VISITED BY YOUNG FRIENDS AUG. 24-30

Dr. Walter C. Woodward has been invited to a conference of Young Friends of the world planned for Jordans, England, a hostel 20 miles out of London, Aug. 24 to 30, following the All-World conference of Friends in London, Aug. 13 to 20.

"Between 350 and 400 Young Friends will attend the conference it is thought," said Clarence C. Pickett, executive secretary of the Young Friends board of the Five Years meeting Tuesday. Mr. Pickett, who attended a conference at Jordans, in 1912, described the site of one of the most historic interest for a conference of Friends. Near the old house, which is now a hostel, and the century-old barn, now a lodging house, are the graves of William Penn, and other Penns and Penningtons.

Nearby is the old home of John Milton and Thomas Gray. During the war Jordans was used as a training station for Friends Ambulance service, the men being trained there in stretcher bearing and first aid.

Four Young Friends Here. In advance of the English conference four well known younger Friends of England will arrive in this country to confer with Young Friends here and arouse interest in the Jordans conference. They will speak in Richmond.

The group includes Rosslyn Earp, a well known physician of England; Rowntree Gillett, a Quaker chaplain, and two others, Roy Calvert and John Makala. Makala is a student in engineering work for a degree at Cambridge and will be unable to come to America until June. The others will come early in May.

Of interest also to American Friends who are to attend the English conference is a Irish conference called July 31 to August 6 in Dublin. Under stress of the present national conditions in Ireland, it is thought this conference will be particularly interesting.

It has been found, say road experts, that the present day rigid foundation, that is at the bottom of all paved roads, is not as efficient as the one time gravel and sand mixtures for some purposes.
