Heart Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman 25 years old. My husband is 21 years my senior. We have been married three years and I don't love him. Life is just a misery with him and he says he doesn't love me. I wish he had never seen me. I want to work and buy myself some decent clothes, but he won't let me. I was engaged to marry a man nearer my own age and a misunderstanding arose between us and our engagement was broken, but I dearly love this man. We pass as strangers and never speak, and haven't for three years. I am miserable for days after I see him, to see what a fool I was to marry a man I didn't love.

I would love to work and then the time would pass more quickly. We haven't any children. His wages are barely sufficient to get what we eat and pay our debts. Neither of us has decent things to wear. I think I ought to work anyway whether he wants me to or not. It is only jealousy that he doesn't want me to go where anyone will see me.

ANXIOUS.
 I admire your husband for not wanting you to work. It is pride rather than jealousy which makes him feel this way.

Your only course seems to be divorce. This is not fair to your husband, but since you cannot love him it is useless for you to try to live with him; you cheapen yourself and make his life unhappy. Since you have no children, your problem is easier, because you will only hurt one by leaving.

It is a pitiful thing when either a girl or man enters into marriage without love. It is the lowest kind of cheating. Be honest to your husband now and ask for your release.

The Diary of an Engaged Girl

By Phyllis Phillips

As we were talking on life in general, Harvey walked into my place. Jean had evidently asked him to call for her there. So woman-like.

I received quite a shock, for Harvey Russell demurred me very much of my own Jack. He is tall and broad, and strong. His point of view is almost identical to Jack's. Really, sometimes I think that when you know one man, you know them all.

He looked disapprovingly when I smoked, and I got quite a thrill out of being the bad member of society for once. How my old pal has changed. He refused a "tag" when I offered her one. La, la, la! the meek shall inherit husbands, if not the earth, say I!

Harvey certainly seemed to have the same quaint prejudice against studios for the very young that Mr. Edmonds (that's Jack when I'm critical) has. He looked my place over in a slow, maddeningly Scotch way, and then sized his keen gray eyes on poor little me, as though to see just what sort of person I was, and whether quite safe for Jean to run with.

This look unless the eight devils within me, and I was transformed into a bon vivant—or whatever you call them. I acted like a merry blade, and experienced person. And I smoked five cigarettes in succession. Disgusting, says I.

Well, after a chilly half hour he arose, and true to type, so did Jean. That girl already has a drop to her forehead. I acted like a merry blade, and experienced person. And I smoked five cigarettes in succession. Disgusting, says I.

Then I, too, departed for home, sweet home. Here I crashed into a very tall and good-looking young man, with snappy black eyes and hair, and an impudent smile. He turned out to be a cousin of mine, just landed from England, and whom we had never seen before.

Cecil Archers is his name, and he looks good to me. They say that cousins are most dangerous, and I'm inclined to believe it, for there was nothing very cousinly about the admiring glances that Cecil treated me to all through dinner, from those dancing eyes of his. I can tell you.

He has the most adorable accent, and we all teased him to death about his la-de-da-de talk. I forgot to say that he kissed me when mother introduced us, and I liked it. Cecil seemed to stir some restless spirit deep within me, that had never stirred before. Maybe it's because he's an importation. I hope so, for then that feeling will wear away as we get familiar with each other.

Of course, it was up to me to entertain him this evening, so we went to a movie, and I just couldn't keep my mind on the pictures for that disturbing presence next to me. Cecil is so "different" from anyone I ever met. I don't understand where or why but he is terribly magnetic.

Several times in the dark our eyes met, and it seemed to me that I was looking into two burning flames, that called out Life to me. I almost wish that Cousin Cecil had stayed in England. I fear the worst. I'm not at all a stable person as yet—and you see I am engaged. Wouldn't everyone be horror-struck if they could read my thoughts? Everyone but Cousin Cecil! (To be continued.)

ST. ANDREW'S CHOR TO UNDERTAKE COMIC OPERA

The members of the choir of St. Andrew's Church and their associates, will meet on Tuesday and Friday night of the coming week for rehearsals. They will undertake the study of the comic opera, "Pocahontas" by Edmonds and Johnston, for presentation in the near future.

Anthony N. Schuh, organist and choirmaster of St. Andrew's will conduct the rehearsals and direct the musical production. Mrs. Loretta Barnell, who has had extensive experience in theatrical work, will be stage manager.

INDIAN IS BLEACHING RACE. Because men of the Indian tribes prefer to marry white women, said Frank La Flesche, ethnologist, and three-quarters Omaha Sioux Indian, recently, and young Indian women prefer white husbands, the Indian race is rapidly losing its former dark skin and becoming more and more like the white man with each passing generation. In time he thinks the race will, as such, be no more than a memory.
