

ROGER SULLIVAN, DEMOCRATIC LEADER, DEAD IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Ill., April 15.—Roger C. Sullivan, 58 years old, for many years Democratic leader of Cook county, died at his home, 342 Wellington avenue, at 4:15 o'clock Thursday. Although his death was due to a sudden heart attack, his entire family was present when he passed away.

Mr. Sullivan passed the winter at Palm Beach. On his arrival here Mr. Sullivan declared that he was feeling "fit as a fiddle."

Sullivan, for 20 years the dominating figure of the Democratic party in Illinois, and for many years a national figure in politics, was born at Belvidere, Ill., February 2, 1861, and was educated in the public schools there.

In 1885 he married Helen M. Quinlan. He was president of the Ogden Gas company, and clerk of the probate court of Cook county, from 1890 to 1894. He was a member of the Cook county Democratic committee since 1890 and a member of the Democratic national committee since 1904.

Mr. Sullivan planned to enter the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco as leader of the Illinois delegation with the avowed intention of making that his last appearance in the political arena.

Mr. Sullivan, condemned in his own state by his opponents as a "boss" and more than once "read out" of the Democratic party by William Jennings Bryan, led the movement that finally resulted in making Woodrow Wilson President.

Roger Sullivan had been a participant in every Democratic convention since 1892 and in at least three of the several he attended, he had been a commanding figure.

Coming to Chicago in 1879 to work in the railroad shops as an apprentice machinist at $1.25 a day, Mr. Sullivan was reputed to be worth more than $1,000,000 at his death.
