

MARION CO. JAIL SCANDAL ISN'T NEW, SAYS REV. BURBANCK

The following letter was written by the Rev. George C. Burbank, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church to an Indianapolis newspaper:

Sir—I have been interested in reading the recent statements of conditions in your local jail. They have a familiar sound, and lead one to agree with the scriptural adage that there is nothing new under the sun, not even inhuman treatment of prisoners in Indianapolis.

About 10 years ago I had occasion to minister to a man who was lodged in the jail pending his removal to the asylum. The tales he told me I discounted largely because of the state of his mind, but if I could not believe all I heard I had to believe all I saw. The man was literally alive with vermin, and some of the food which he had saved from the morning meal to show me was also alive.

He was scarred and bruised badly, one eye was closed, and he fairly shook with weakness and fear as he talked to me. When he was finally removed from the jail to the hospital my visits to the jail ceased, but evidently conditions did not.

The same agitation was in the air ten years ago that is in the air today. The same denunciation of food and treatment, the same condemnation of confining the mentally unbalanced with criminals, the same protest against herding new offenders with those grown old in vice. You will find an interview which I gave to one of your reporters on the front page of one of your issues, in the second of third column.

Might it not be well to clean up this abuse now and for all time so that similar conditions will not crop out years hence and bring back memories that shame a civilization that claims to be modern? The present sheriff may be guilty of neglect but he is not the only sinner who has held the office. These things did not begin in this sheriff's term; they are simply continued in it. While the probe of publicity is being pushed into this skin, let it go to the seat of the corruption. Here is something for others beside politicians to think about: It is a blot which the best citizens should inquire into and dispose of for all time.

Your slogan for Indianapolis is that it is "No Mean City." I wonder how long Saul of Tarsus would stand for anything that besmirched the fame of his town? Let Indianapolis alter its slogan or change its conditions. Whether or not a city is to be judged by the character of its jails is an open question, but this much is true: The people of Indianapolis have no right to act criminally toward criminals. This they have done through their representatives, the sheriff and his underlings. The people outside of jail are supposed to be better than those inside, but when conditions are as degraded as this, it is a disgrace to any community calling itself civilized, unbiased observers are free to draw their own conclusions.

GEORGE C. BURBANCK,

The Diary of an Engaged Girl

By Phyllis Phillips

I finished my head of Jean today, and it is fine. Ordinarily, she is not such a good model, but Love has soothed her for the nonce, and I found her exceptionally quiet and manageable all afternoon.

I noticed the same expression in her eyes that Aunt Cecilia has developed and it interested me greatly. I fear that I alone am lacking in the dreamy expression so often to be found in the orbs of those in love. Possibly other people observe this in my eyes, too, but I have never yet noticed it.

I teased Jean about her state of affairs, and she was very sweet about it, simply said that it came once to every man, so why not women? That is quite right. Poor old girl, she is worried about all sorts of things, I can see, but she says little. I take it that her lover is every bit as curious in his point of view as all other lovers. It can't be helped. We take them for better or for worse, as I explained to her.

Thanks to her gentler mood, I finished her portrait in one sitting, where I had expected at least six to be necessary. I suppose I shall live to see all of my friends succumb to the darts of Dan Cupid, and am steeling myself to the next shock. I asked Jean if she were planning a studio apartment for her future life, and she reddened a bit and said no. He, too, has a fondness for large spaces and quiet surroundings. My poor little pal, she will suffer more than I, for she is less philosophical.

Looks like we were going to have a great many weddings next autumn. Well, one thing about it is that we'll all be getting experiences at the same time. It's some comfort to realize that there are any number of friends in the same boat as yourself. The rain is pattering down outside my window, as I write, and I am soothed infinitely by its gentle sound. My costume for the dance tomorrow night lies before me. It is a Chinese affair and most becoming, for I have sort of long eyes, anyhow, though I must say I do not possess all the subtlety of the Oriental.

My cousin Cecil is also going, by special request, and is actually excited at the prospect. I am curious to see how he dances. Dancing is the acid test, and I shall put him to it, rest assured. Even his British serenity will not be impervious to my charms as a dancer.

Jack has not been over-attentive for the last day or so. He is in the same boat as I am, has a cousin to entertain. She will be at the dance tomorrow night. I'm quite anxious to meet her, for some strange reason. I know she is my age, and hails from Los Angeles. I shall introduce her to Cecil, perhaps he will fall in love with her. I'd love him to do so. Jack says that he used to play with Barbara (that's her name) when he was a kid. She has no mother, poor child, and just loves to visit Mrs. Edmonds for that reason. The family is in moderate circumstances, and it means a great deal to her to be able to be whisked about from one gorgeous scene to another, as she is when on her visits east.

I can see that Jack has a very soft spot for Barbara in his heart, and after all it's not to be wondered at. She's very pretty and he tells me, "very breezy." Cecil just needs a western breeze to blow through his being at this moment, so here's hoping.

Heart and Beauty Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young married woman and have been married three years. My husband is very good to me, but within the last year I have met a young man in business and since I have dealt with him I have not been contented. My husband loves me and is very good to me.

I cannot give up this young man. He is never out of my mind, day or night, and I do not care to live since I have met him. He is very attractive, very dandy and good in all ways.

My husband has an idea that I love him, but I cannot help it. I do not know whether he knows with other young ladies or not. I have been thinking I would shoot him and myself, but I love him too dearly for that. When I see him I am worse than ever. I will love him until death takes him. Would much rather have him dead than not to see him when I please.

HEART BROKEN.
You have been permitting your thought to run riot and unless you gain control of yourself the results will be disastrous.

Reason points to immortality of the soul. If you do violence to the man he will hate you for it whether his soul is here or in the next world. Do the right thing now, realizing that life is short and sometime, somewhere, you can meet your hearts' desire. You sacrifice all claim by wrong doing.

Go away from temptation. Tell your husband the truth and ask him to take you somewhere so that you will have a chance to forget the man whom life has not meant for you. Forget yourself in this matter and do what you consider most fair to your husband.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a boy 19 years old. I have been in love with the same girl for quite a number of years. My people do not approve of her. What would you advise me to do? I am sure she is perfectly all right, although they do not think so. Their fears are founded on gossip alone.

Also will you tell me how to make my voice coarser. People laugh at me. I hate worse than anything in all the world to be a sissy. Please advise me.

DESPAIR.
Your people are probably the kind who cannot feel that any girl is worthy of their wonderful son. They do not realize that the girl you care for is young and undeveloped and does not show just yet the qualities they want your wife to possess.

Since you know the girl to be all right, enjoy her as a friend and do not think of love and marriage. You need all the schooling you can get and then a few years of experience in business before you assume the responsibilities of marriage. Time will solve your problem as it should be solved.

It is most trying to have an effeminate voice, but most boys pass through such a trying period. Your voice probably will become lower later.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I correspond with a boy away from our home town, but do not care for him except as a friend and I think he feels the same towards me. I write him because I get lonesome sometimes. Do you think it all right to keep corresponding with him?

A GIRL.
Yes, the correspondence is all right. It is not necessary to love in order to correspond.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 19 and have been in love with a young man for some time. He always said he loved me. We were engaged and not say any more about marriage. He says he still loves me and I love him.

He talks of other girls and I don't like that at all. I speak of boys and he says nothing to me at all.

We got along all right until Sunday night. He got angry with me for something I said which I did not mean. I tried to make him believe I told the truth, but he would not and said he would not forgive me.

What shall I do? I don't want another boy's company—only his. Please help me. P. R. V.

Fear filled your heart when you saw the man was angry. Then you tried too hard to gain his forgiveness and to keep him. Surprise him now and do not show in any way that you care because he has dropped you. Your indifference will not flatter him and there is a chance that he will take a new interest in you.

Your trials and tribulations are simply a phase of youth. In a year or two you and young men will meet on a saner basis. The same trifles will not excite anger and you will be much happier together. Love cannot stand the strain of much wrangling.

Sea water half a mile deep in the tropics has a temperature of less than 40 degrees.
