

HITCHCOCK OUT OF RACE FOR DEMOCRAT LEADER OF SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 24.—As a result of the withdrawal of Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, from the contest for the Democratic leadership in the senate, it was believed generally among party leaders today that the selection of Senator Underwood, of Alabama, for the post would be unopposed when the Democratic conference is held Tuesday night.

Senators Hitchcock and Underwood were the only candidates, and the race was so close that a deadlock existed for several months.

The Nebraska senator announced his decision to withdraw last night, in a letter to the members of his party in the senate. He wrote that his withdrawal would conduce to party harmony, and would accord with his individual plans, which were directed by his family to spend the remainder of the year to assume the work of minority leader.

Friends explained that he expected to be away from Washington at frequent intervals during the summer.

Keats Once Wrote Lines

Befitting Musical Comedy (Ruth Lambert Jones, in Boston Transcript)

Unfelt, unheard, unseen,
I've left my little queen,
Whence these lines? We can fancy
The sweet hero of a musical comedy
Waiting there abroad as he "jazzes"
Nonchalantly through glittering ranks
Of the eternal feminine, every
A not-too-heavily clad chorus responding
In a shrill-pitched, syncopation:
He's left his little queen, he's left his
"little queen!"

Or we can imagine the lines, merely a part of a popular song, emblazoned on the sheet music, accompanying every piano in the land, vociferated mechanically by countless phonographs, or waited plaintively by cafe singers amidst gastronomic vapors.

And their author? Any facetiously inclined modern—from a professional hack lyricist to a poet—Sir James Barrie born on playing anodyne, anonymous joke upon a bewildered, sober-minded world. Anybody of the present day and generation—but hold! there is after all a class of beings above suspicion. For we may be reasonably sure that neither Miss Lowell nor one of her disciples would indulge in the infamy of rhyme.

Wherefore, rumination runs riot—to the point of discovering that these words, so flippant to twentieth century ears, were penned in 1817 as the beginning of a seriously amorous poem entitled "Lines By a Certain John Keats."

Monier Stars in "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme"; Play Splendid Success

Jacques Monier, a Frenchman, student at Earlham college, starred in the French comedy "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme", given in Lindley hall at Earlham Friday evening to a large audience. Monier displayed dramatic ability in his interpretation of the role of the wealthy bourgeois who desired to become a member of the nobility.

Hurford Crossman as Coville, the intriguing servant, Eugene Murray, as the teacher of philosophy, and Glen Harshbarger as the dancing master, created a hit. Jeanette Wilson as Madame Jourdain, who highly disapproved her husband's methods was splendid in her part. Miss Carolyn Bradley made an attractive appearance in the role of Lucille, daughter of the Jourdain.

All of the students participating are members of the French department of the college. Monier's French of the play was excellent as well as the action. The play itself is a "scream" of a comedy. John Haramy, instructor in the French department, coached. The proceeds will be given to the college gymnasium fund.
