

NEXT WEEK AT THE THEATERS

WASHINGTON.

Norma Talmadge productions are always unusual. There must be something for Norma, herself, is unusual. Her quaint and widely varied characterizations are at once the surprise and the delight of her thousands of admirers.

Many have asked why she never was given the opportunity of demonstrating her very evident ability as a comedienne. The answer is simple. Until of late a suitable vehicle for these types has never been found.

At last, however, she is to be presented in a comedy photoplay as dainty and piquant as her own sweet self. "She Loves and Lies," a new Select Special, is the play and it will be presented at the Washington theatre for three days, beginning Sunday.

MURRAY VAUDEVILLE

Rives and Arnold in their comedy singing and talking sketch, "A Big Sale," will headline the bill opening Monday matinee at The Murray for the first half. This act is full of surprises and comedy, and comes here direct from the larger city circuits.

Also on the same bill come Rover and Nelson, two young men with their scenic comedy act entitled "Wanted, a Jockey," and the Gabberts, a man and woman who term themselves "America's Ingenious Athletes." The screen this half will reveal Corinne Griffith supported by that old-time favorite Maurice Costello, in "Human Collateral," the story of a girl who was given as a bond for a huge loan of money. This is a five-reel Vitagraph production.

"Ship Ah! Heave to, my hearties." Here they come Thursday and the entire last half, the biggest feature act ever booked at the Murray. President Wilson's own sailor show "Every Sailor" with the same cast of U. S. sailors who produced this musical comedy at sea aboard the good ship George Washington, for the entertainment of President Wilson and party. This big production is billed as "A Jazzy, Shimmying Musical Comedy with a Chorus of Girlie Gobs," featuring Harry Down-edge of people and customs during the gold-rush days after he has seen "Paid in Advance."

MURRAY.

Miss Shirkey Mason, the Fox star who is known as "95 pounds of pep, personality and prettiness," made a decided hit at the Murray Theatre, where she is presented by William Fox in the screen version of Frank R. Adams' story, "Molly and I and the Silver Ring." In the screen version the title has been shortened to "Molly and I"; but there is no need of shortening her slogan "95 pounds of pep, personality and prettiness."

Her company is an excellent one. Albert Roscoe, as leading man, gives his usual performance and the direction by Howard M. Mitchell leaves nothing to be desired.

MURRETTE

Girls, if you were married for three weary years to a perfectly good man, who never came home a little "tipsy," who never ate onions, who never looked at another woman, who never smoked or swore—if you were married to this sort of a saint, what sort of a husband would you look around for after the demise of this noble one?

It's a ten to one bet that you would do just as Georgiana Charbourne did—step out and search for the wickedest man in New York. And if you couldn't find one—what then?

"In Search of a Sinner," starring Constance Talmadge, and distributed by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which is showing at the Murrerette Theatre, will explain the whole thing better than you could dope it out for yourself. Miss Talmadge is the virtuous wife and Radcliffe Fellows is the "good little devil." The screen version was adapted by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

This big production is billed as "A Jazzy, Shimmying Musical Comedy with a Chorus of Girlie Gobs," featuring Harry Downing and Al Van Zandt. Since their discharge from service these boys presented this production at the Palace Theatre, New York City, where it met with such favor that it was booked for the entire Keith circuit, and has proven one of the sensations of the vaudeville season. They come direct from the Palace Theatre, Fort Wayne, to the Murray, and you could suggest coming earlier than usual, while these soldiers are in the city, for they are breaking house records every place where they are booked. No advance in the price, although it is costing the management a small fortune to bring them here. Two other very good acts will also be on the same bill. These are Jennings and O'Brien, a man and woman comedy team, who will hold their own on any bill, and Ben Linn ("Big Ben"), a singing and talking monologist. This will positively be the biggest bill of the season. Harry T. Morey in his latest five-reel Vitagraph production, "The Birth of a Soul," will be the screen attraction.

PALACE.

The first Jewel Production featuring Dorothy Phillips since that memorable photoplay, "Destiny," will be seen at the Palace Theatre, Sunday and Monday.
