Anderson Has Only One Indiana Crime To Credit, Muncie Officials Learn

William Anderson, 48, a negro who is serving a life sentence in the Indiana state prison at Michigan City for the murder of Clyde Benadum, Muncie druggist, on the night of June 10, 1919, has but one Indiana crime to his record, according to advices received yesterday from Warden Fogarty, who is in charge of the penitentiary.

Anderson did not kidnap Francis Reed, 12-year-old Rochester, N. Y. boy, according to the warden and detectives who interviewed Anderson in the prison a few weeks ago. Neither did Anderson admit killing Fred Holle, who was held up and shot fatally near Fort Wayne on the night of May 30, 1919, authorities say. Holle was with Bernadine Woenker of Fort Wayne when the tragedy occurred.

Anderson was arrested with Walter Arnett, 17-year-old Union City boy, after a fight with Sheriff Carr, Patrolman Dave Carr and Chief Wenger near Economy. He was returned to Muncie and lodged in jail but escaped from the woman's compartment where he had been placed because of injuries that he had received in the gun-fight. He was re-captured, however, and sentenced to life imprisonment in the state prison for the death of Benadum. He was caught near Honey Creek.

During his confinement to the Muncie jail, Anderson was accused of the murder of Holle, but denied that he had been in the vicinity at the time of the shooting which cost Holle's life. Miss Woenker, however, identified Anderson.

Rochester detectives were told by Anderson that he had kidnapped Reed and that he was still alive. He would volunteer no further information, however.

The lead given the officers several weeks ago has since proved unfounded, according to information received by Warden Fogarty from the detectives.

Prison authorities contend that Anderson has but one Indiana crime, that of the murder of Benadum.

Tomorrow May Never Come; Why Worry, Is Philosophy

(Los Angeles Times)
We were all sitting out on the front porch of the house on the mesa, from which, at night, you can see the twinkling lights of the pleasant town of San Fernando and the white walls of the old mission when there is a moon.

And it was at about the time that the tobacco can had been passed for the third smoke that the conversation came around to the day before.

We all knew that the day before had been one that our neighbors dreaded. He had to go down to the roaring town that day to wrestle with bankers behind wire cages—bankers with cold, gray eyes and corrugated brows. And we knew that our neighbors would have had a hard time getting by on that day, as he was saying.

Well, here he was home again and none the worse for the wear, as far as we could see.

The man who plays the flute and who walks ten miles once a week to do it—that spoke first. "Well," said he to our neighbor, "you got along all right in town yesterday, didn't you?" And our neighbor said he did but he hoped that a day like that would never come again for him or for anybody else.

Then our neighbor said that the thing he regretted about it was that he did not bear himself well in the fight. He went into it scared and came out of it with the cold sweat all over his body. And the thing was that he should have borne himself more bravely, especially since he was destined to come out all right in the end.

We thought a good deal about that as we walked home under the stars that night. There is a lot of trouble that never happens to us, and to ourselves; and a coward dies a thousand deaths.

To Make Motoring Safer
(From the St. Louis Times)

The best way to avoid trouble when touring is to "Look out for the other fellow on the road."

First assume that you must look out for yourself and the other fellow, too. Don't rely wholly on the other fellow doing the right thing, and you'll be on your guard if he does the wrong thing and ready for the emergency.

Never back or swing from the curb into the street without looking back to see if the way is clear.

Glance both ways on each cross street, and if you're not on the main thoroughfare slow down before you cross. It's safest to drive slowly enough to have the car well under control where buildings hide the intersecting streets.

Do not cut the corners in turning but keep well to your side of the street, and look both ways before you make the turn.

Put out a hand as a guide to the car following or approaching. In passing a slower moving vehicle pass it on your left, but in passing a street car always keep to the right.

Do not follow another vehicle too closely. It might stop suddenly.

Stop when the street car ahead of you stops and stand still till all passengers getting off are out of the street. In most cities this is required by ordinances.

Dim your light when approaching an other motor car on the road.

Use common sense at all times and you'll save trouble for yourself and the other fellow.

Watch Oyster Scale.—Shade and fruit trees in Wayne county should be watched for the oyster scale, a destructive tree pest now hatching, according to the communication from Frank Wallace, state entomologist. A spray of one gallon of fish oil soap, two ounces of "blackleaf 39," and five gallons of water is recommended.

COMPERS DEBATES WITH ALLEN ON THE RIGHT TO STRIKE

NEW YORK, May 29.—The relations of capital and labor; the right to strike and its legitimacy as regards the effect on the public; the Kansas industrial court law and its significance to the future of the working man were discussed from all angles in a remarkable debate Friday night in Carnegie Hall between Samuel Compers, president of the American Federation of Labor and Gov. Henry J. Allen, of Kansas.

Governor Allen's main contention was that government has the right to protect the public against strikes when its welfare is imperilled, while Mr. Compers held to the argument that no law can prevent a man from stopping work if by doing so he may benefit himself and his family. Mr. Compers labelled the Kansas court law the "Un-American Slave Law" and Governor Allen declared he had taken away from Mr. Compers his divine right to order a man to quit work.

The oratory of the debaters was punctuated with frequent cheers and boos by adherents of each side. Occasionally questions shouted from the floor and the balconies.

In support of the right to strike, Mr. Compers declared that the coal miners' strike took boys out of the mines; that the textile workers strike brought children out of the mills and put them in the school room, while the strike in the needle trades broke up the sweat-shops when laws had failed to do so.

Governor Allen's industrial commandment was "you shall not conspire to shut down the industry necessary to the welfare of the people." "When the general public says we have had enough of this," he said "it's over."

"Who controls the divine right to quit work?" Governor Allen asked. He was answered with cheers and boos. The debate called for no decision, the committee in charge having purposely divided the house equally between supporters of each speaker.

TRUSTEES DISAPPROVE BONUS PLAN FOR TEACHERS' PAY

A legislative program proposed for school regulations was discussed Friday at Indianapolis by the legislative committee of the Township Trustees' association of Indiana, which was called together by Lew Lewis, of Manilla, chairman. The trustees disapproved of the bonus plan of increasing school teachers' pay, such as used in Indianapolis and other cities this year.

The trustees favored increases in pay, but asserted that salaries should not be raised until this year's contracts expire, and that the contracts should be rigidly enforced. Bonus increases tended to cause dissatisfaction in smaller communities, it was said. Mr. Lewis represented the Sixth district.

SHE FEELS FINE NOW

Aches and pains often indicate kidneys out of order. Your kidneys surely need help—and quickly—when your hands or feet are swollen and you feel dull and sluggish, lose your appetite and your energy and there is a puffiness about the eyes. Mrs. L. Gibson, 12th and Edison St., La Junta, Colo., writes: "My kidneys were giving me a great deal of trouble for some time. I took Foley Kidney Pills and they helped me right away. I feel fine now."
