NEGRO LYNCHED BY MOB
INNOCENT EMPLOYER SAYS
DURHAM, N. C., July 12.—The negro who was taken from the person county jail last Wednesday and lynched in a churchyard near Roxboro, shortly after his arrest, on a charge of having attacked a 13-year-old white girl, was innocent of the crime, according to Nels Teer, a contractor for whom Roebuck worked. Teer declared in a signed statement, worked through Tuesday afternoon when the crime is alleged to have been committed, and did not leave the construction camp where he was employed until 5:30 p. m. The assault, it is said, had occurred between 2:30 and 3 o'clock.

Art World

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 12.—When William Dudley Foulke of Richmond made plans for a sojourn in Italy he wished to have others enjoy his art collection during his absence, so he arranged for the exhibition of a part of his pictures at the John Brown art institute here. Director Brown was invited to see the works of art in Mr. Foulke's home in order to select such things as he wished to display in the gallery. As a result 38 paintings and a few pieces of ancient armor are now on exhibition in the large east gallery on the upper floor. With one or two exceptions the pictures are all examples of European art, and for the most part, of the earlier schools. Nearly all the pictures have been collected by Mr. Foulke in his travels. Included in the collection are paintings, either originals or faithful copies from Italy, Spain, France, Holland, England, Germany, Poland, Denmark, Mexico.

Another picture which bears a personal message is a large water color landscape, "Villa of the Marquis Brust" on Lake Bracciano, painted by an English artist and bought in 1914. This villa in the north of Italy has been leased by Mr. Foulke until next spring. Upon looking at the picture there is no doubt about it that when Mr. and Mrs. Foulke set sail for Italy this month, the boat on which they sail will turn about and take them, not to Italy, but straight to Italyland. One of two things is certain. Either that enchanting old villa had its plans laid out by the hand of some Italian architect, when it was built some 200 years ago, or else the painter's palette has been mixed on a fairy's palette. In the picture the old mansion appears built between mountain and lake in a table of towers and a protecting stone wall separates it from the water's edge; to the back of it the mountains rise almost perpendicular sides to the sky through mists that veil them with pale tints of purple and rose-gold. Flights of steps and stone walls and flower-bordered paths seem to go a part of the house that it is difficult to think of one without the other. The picture is bright and sunny—all but the groups of old yew trees that stand by the water's edge. To live in that spot for nearly a year! What poems will Mr. Foulke be sending us!

A Bit of Realism.
An example of realistic child portraiture, which appears to many for its lifelike quality and its skillful handling of detail, is "The Picture Book" by Jasinsky, a Polish artist whose canvases were displayed at the world's fair in Chicago in 1893. When Mr. Foulke was in Berlin in 1896 he discovered an old canvas in a junk shop. From the very fact that the canvas was in bad shape and had been worked over, it attracted him. He took it to an expert who was employed with the principal gallery in Berlin. The expert identified it as being
