

DEATH OF EUGENIE RECALLS GLORY OF NAPOLEON'S FAME

MADRID, July 12.—The ex-Empress Eugenie of France, died here Sunday morning. She came to Madrid several months ago to visit the Queen.

Born on May 5, 1825, Eugenie Marie DeMontijo, former Empress of the French, was descended on her father's side from a Spanish family of high nobility, the head of which in 1492 received the title of Count de Teba at the hands of Ferdinand and Isabella.

After the marriage of the elder daughter the countess in 1849 took up her residence with Eugenie in Paris. Here the young lady became celebrated for her beauty, her amiability and her rare mental gifts.

She meets Napoleon III. Eugenie made the acquaintance of Prince Napoleon, as he was then called, when he was living at the Elisee in his character of President of the French Republic. From the first he was attracted to the brilliant young Spanish girl.

Early in January, 1853, he started his ministers by announcing that he had determined on an alliance with Mlle. DeMontijo. The news excited much opposition.

Three years elapsed between the Emperor's marriage and the birth of his only child. This occurred March 16, 1856. With the birth of the Prince Imperial troubles arose between Eugenie and the Bonaparte family. She was jealous and suspicious of all possible pretenders to the succession.

Interested in politics, she took a keen interest in political matters, and greatly annoyed the Emperor's ministers by insisting on being present at the state councils. She was three times appointed regent in 1866, during the Italian war in 1866, and when the Emperor started on the last disastrous expedition which ended at Sedan.

The royal refugees made their home at Chislehurst, England. Here the Emperor died Jan. 9, 1873. The Prince of Imperial gained the consent of his mother to join the British expedition to South Africa in 1879. In an engagement with the Zulus in June of that year, he met his death. His remains were interred beside those of Napoleon III at Chislehurst. A few years later Eugenie made a pilgrimage to Zulu-land and visited the spot where her son met his death.

Lived in Splendor. For 17 years the life of the Empress Eugenie was one of splendor and enchantment. Known as "the most beautiful woman in Europe," and idolized by all France, she received the homage of the world's sovereigns. Suddenly everything crumbled. Popularly, happiness, position, wealth and even her home vanished and she became, to use her own words, "merely an echo of a glory that has faded living in the memories of the long ago."

MURRAY

"Cha'ty chile? Nebah!" said Mammy, which, translated, means that Mary Ann Hubbard's faithful old servant would fight if necessary to keep her beloved charge, the same Mary Ann, from being taken in charge by the Ladies Aid Society and placed in a charitable organization.

To escape such disgrace to the honored name of Hubbard—of which Mary Ann was the sole and penniless survivor—Mammy used her few savings to send Mary Ann to New York and Dick Allison, whose acquaintance they had made while he was seeking health in the South.

Dick had almost forgotten about his little Southern friend when in walked Mary, who certainly hadn't forgotten him, and who couldn't understand why he wasn't all right for her, though unchaperoned, to visit a bachelor. But as Dick was about to marry a widow who, though in love with another, was married to Dick for his brother's sake, it was impossible for him to walk in when she did.

What happened when "In Walked Mary" is showing at the Murray Theatre Monday with June Caprice starring as Mary Ann.

MURRETTE. Would you buy at the expense of your country, your life and perhaps that of the girl you loved? Robert Trevor had been accused by a dying man of murder. The dead man's wife was also incriminated. At the eleventh hour an agent of a foreign country offered to testify that he had committed the murder if Trevor would turn over to him certain dye formulas belonging to the United States and wanted by the spy's country.

What did Robert Trevor say to that?

proposition. Did his love for the girl outweigh his love for his country? Was the girl, too, willing to make the sacrifice?

"The Blood Barrier," the J. Stuart Blackton-Pathé feature picture on the program at the Murray Theatre this week, presents an interesting situation as that above. The principal figures in it are played by Sylvia Breamer and Robert Gordon, with William R. Dunn, Margaret Berry, Louise Dean, Eddy Dunn and Gus Alexander playing prominent parts.

WASHINGTON.

Bebe Daniels, the pretty motion picture player who is Wallace Reid's leading woman at the Washington Theatre this week in "The Dancin' Fool," made her debut in dramatics at the age of ten weeks. Her mother and father were both actors, and Bebe was carried on the stage in her mother's arms. At the age of eight, Miss Daniels abandoned theatricals to enter a convent.

Four years ago, Miss Daniels received her diploma from the convent school and immediately satisfied a long-cherished ambition by breaking into motion pictures. Until recently she specialized in comedy, serving as foil for one of the leading slapstick artists. Then came the opportunity to do more serious work under Cecil B. De Mille's direction, and Miss Daniels accepted it eagerly. Her work in the Babylon episode in "The Sign of the Cross" and as the "other woman" in "Why Change Your Wife?" established her as a character actress of extraordinary ability.

As the girl-heroine of "The Dancin' Fool," Miss Daniels has one of the most congenial parts of her career. She is cast as a cabaret dancer, who is really a modest, home-loving girl at heart. The picture was adapted by Clara Kennedy from a magazine serial by Henry Payson Dowst. Sam Wood directed, and it is a Paramount Art-craft picture.

WASHINGTON. The new Wallace Reid picture, "The Dancin' Fool," coming to the Washington Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, is a veritable revue of the latest jazz dance steps as well as an unusually entertaining screen comedy. As a country youth lately come to New York at a six-dollar-a-week job in his Uncle Enoch's factory, Mr. Reid as "Vee" Tibble, discovers that his fortune lies in his feet and blossoms forth as the sensation of a Broadway cabaret. With pretty Bebe Daniels as his partner, Wallie exhibits a choice variety of unique dances, ranging from an Apache number to a jizzical expose of the manner in which the cave man used to woo his mate.

The latter dance required the handsome star to don a costume of animal skins.

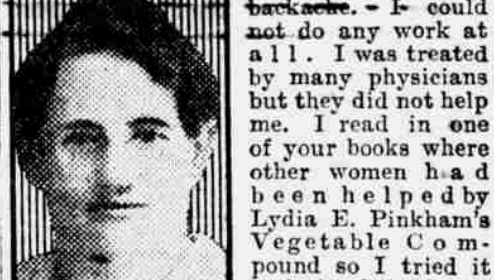

"The animal used for my outfit must have been very small," laughed Wallie afterward. "The scene was made on an outdoor stage at the studio on a February morning. If my cave man's dance degenerates into a quite modern shimmy, please blame it on the cold."

It is said that wealthy French women use extra dry champagne as a shampoo.

PUBLISH MY LETTER

Says Mrs. Ovenstein, So Other Suffering Women May Learn How to Get Well.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered for four years with pains in my sides, hips and legs and a terrible backache. I could not do any work at all. I was treated by many physicians but they did not help me. I read in one of your books where other women had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I tried it and it helped me very much so that now I can do everything in the house. I have told my friends about your wonderful Vegetable Compound and you have my permission to publish my letter so other women who suffer may learn how to get well."—Mrs. IDA OVENSTEIN, 902 S. Marshall Ave., Chicago, Ill.

This good old-fashioned remedy is made from native roots and herbs and contains no narcotics or harmful drugs. If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Heroic Doctor Performs Operation on Himself

CHICAGO, July 12.—With steady hand and nerve, and calmly going about his business as if he was performing the simplest of operations, Dr. Orlando P. Scott, of Chicago, a well known surgeon, today cut strip after strip of flesh from his own thigh and grafted them on to his wife's foot and ankle, as he rested on a portable table at his wife's bedside.

The entire operation was performed without a single administration of anesthetic and in the presence of a number of physicians and nurses. Roby came from different parts of the room, as Dr. Scott, without so much as a wince of pain, drove the surgeon's knife into his own flesh, and then speedily grafted the strips upon his wife's foot.

A fellow physician stood by him to dress his wounds. Several times, as Dr. Scott drove the knife into his thigh, he turned to the witnesses of the operation, explaining technical points of the operation to them. Many were blinded with tears.

Dr. Scott's act of self-sacrifice and heroism was performed to save his wife from disfigurement and possible loss of her right leg. Mrs. Scott was injured when in an automobile accident six weeks ago. Her right leg was crushed and the flesh stripped from it in long gashes. Gangrene set in later, and in order to avoid amputation a skin grafting was decided upon.

A Newspaper Man Asks Information About Gasoline Prices

"WHAT are the reasons for the advance in gasoline prices?" was asked by the President of a large daily newspaper.

Continuing, the gentlemen said: "I can conceive how the cost of a manufactured article might increase as much as 50 to 100 percent because of the increased cost of raw materials, labor, etc.; but it has always seemed to me that the price of a product taken from the ground at a comparatively low cost should not be affected to any marked degree."

This constitutes a fair question, and we are glad of an opportunity to answer it frankly.

Gasoline is refined from crude petroleum by a lengthy and expensive process, and is, in the truest sense, a manufactured article. Time, labor, and heavy investments enter into the manufacture of gasoline from the crude, and each of these necessarily affect the price.

The cost of crude is a dominant factor in fixing the price of gasoline.

The extraordinary demand for petroleum products, plus the abnormal increases in the cost of labor, machinery, and money necessary for drilling and equipping oil wells, have combined to force upwards the price of crude oil from $1.54 to $4.30 per barrel in four years, nearly 180 percent.

For the same period the selling price of gasoline has increased but 44 percent.

Since the Armistice was signed, the production of automobiles, tractors, trucks, and other power using machinery, has created a demand for gasoline far in excess of normal. Gasoline reserves have been reduced to an alarming extent, and the bidding for crude oil on the part of refiners generally, has forced prices upward. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) having practically no wells of its own is obliged to go into the open market and compete with other refiners for the crude oil it requires.

Because of its acknowledged superior efficiency in manufacturing, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) despite these conditions has been able to exert a marked deterrent pressure upon the upward sweep of the gasoline market.

MY RHEUMATISM WAS ALWAYS BAD IN RAINY WEATHER

Richmond, Ind. resident declares sore muscles and aching joints foretold when bad weather was coming. Limbs got stiff and back ached.

Since taking Dreco, the rheumatism has been entirely relieved.

"I could always tell when we were going to have a bad spell of weather by the way my rheumatic joints and muscles acted," said Mr. E. M. Miller, living at 222 S. 12th St., Richmond, Ind.

"I have been a patient sufferer from this dread disease for years. My muscles would become sore and drawn, especially the muscles in my shoulders and limbs; my joints seemed stiff and dry; you could hear them pop and crack at times and my back was so stiff I couldn't bend over to the floor nor turn around quick; looked like I was full of rheumatism all over. I took a lot of medicine for this trouble, which must have been hard on my stomach, for it got weak so that it did not digest my food, but lay heavy and formed sour gas that bloated me terribly. My bowels were constipated and my kidneys often had me up several times during the night. "Dreco sure has knocked the rheumatism out of me. My muscles no longer feel drawn or tight; my joints are free from pain and I stoop over, bend about and climb steps without any difficulty at all. I no longer have gas to bloat me; my bowels act regular and I haven't had to get up one time with my kidneys since I started taking Dreco. This sure is one grand medicine."

Dreco is composed of the juices and extracts of many different roots, herbs, barks and leaves, which act on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and purify the blood. It relieves constipation, prevents gas forming in the stomach, increases the appetite, insures sound, refreshing sleep, banishes catarrh of the head and takes the pain out of rheumatic joints.

Dreco is sold by all good druggists and is highly recommended in Richmond by Clem Thistlethwaite's seven drug stores.—Advertisement—
