

BISHOP AND MEN OF INDIANA METHODIST CHURCH LAY PLANS

Plans for organization of the newly created area of the Methodist Episcopal church in Indiana were proposed by Bishop Frederick Deland Leece at the session of the state conference council meeting at Central Avenue M. E. church in Indianapolis Thursday.

Bishop Leece suggested that an area council, a state council, conference councils representing the three conferences in the state, district councils elected by the eighteen districts in the state, and city councils which shall be business bodies composed of business men and adapted to the individual cases, be chosen to carry out plans to promote the best interests of the church. Committees were appointed to work out the details of the organization.

Council for Colored Church. Under Bishop Leece's plan, the area council and the state council are to be composed of the same members but the area council is intended to govern the affairs of the Lexington conference, composed of the colored Methodist Episcopal churches in Indiana. The state council will be composed of the members of the conference councils of the Indiana, the north Indiana and the northwestern Indiana conferences, into which the state is divided.

Councils for Each Conference. Conference councils are to be elected in each conference and lay association by districts on the basis of one minister and one layman for each 4,000 full members of the churches. The district superintendents will be ministerial delegates of their districts. The district councils shall be elected by the districts for their own work in such numbers as shall be desired. The city councils, formal or informal in organization, will act separately or with the local Methodist Union wherever they may be desired and assembled by the resident bishop or by the district superintendent.

Division of Work. Believing that the future activities of the area can best be carried on through committees, Bishop Leece suggested that the state council work be divided under the following heads: An executive and finance committee, a committee on public interests, a committee on young people's work which shall embrace child welfare work and correction and a committee on resources and methods which "shall study the human field with reference to the spiritual development and closer enlistment of prominent and useful persons in the work of the church."

These plans will be acted on by a committee on stated meetings, place of meeting and on the incorporation of the state conference. Brief talks were made by Dr. C. S. Woods, who spoke in behalf of the Methodist hospitals; Dr. A. F. Hughes, of Evansville College, and Dr. Ernest C. Wareing, of Cincinnati, editor of the Western Christian Advocate. Bishop Leece presided. Dr. Somerville Light, superintendent of the Richmond district, gave a Bible reading, and Dr. W. F. Switzer, superintendent of the Greencastle district, offered prayer.

Dr. Light also led prayer meeting in an Indianapolis church Thursday night.

Carpets of the Homeric age were generally of cloth.
