Political Issues of Importance

Eliminating minor issues from the two platforms of the dominating parties and discarding factors of little consequence to the future welfare of the nation, the American people are confronted by five major propositions in the fall election, and their attitude toward these five points, expressed by the tickets they vote, probably will be the deciding factor in the selection of the victorious party.

The stand taken by the two parties, as well as the known attitude of the standard bearers toward these issues, will influence the voters more than the consideration of all other planks adopted at Chicago and San Francisco.

Foremost is the question of determining the national policy toward international affairs, the issue revolving about the League of Nations.

Next in importance is improvement in the taxation system to remove handicaps thwarting industrial and commercial expansion, as well as being responsible, in a measure at least, for increases in the prices of commodities.

Alleviation of industrial unrest, a problem of grave concern to both employer and employee, is a domestic issue of paramount importance.

Closely akin is the problem of increasing production and reducing the inflation of currency.

Enforcement of the prohibition amendment will be a deciding factor for many voters.

The personal attitude of the voters toward these issues will be reflected in the party they support, so that the victory of either party can be accepted as a clean-cut, decisive and emphatic approval of the expressed or implied stand the party has taken on these issues.

Citizens who have believed that the campaign would be a tame affair, devoid of clearly defined issues on which the two parties differed, and stripped of the excitement characterizing former political battles, will be doomed to disappointment. Grave issues are at stake. No conscientious voter will go to the polls this year without feeling that on his decision may depend the destiny of the nation.

Answers to Questions

Subscriber—In what body is the supreme legislative power of the British Empire vested?—In the Parliament. In what body is the executive power vested?—Nominally in the Crown, but practically in a committee of ministers, called the cabinet, whose existence is dependent on the support of a majority in the House of Commons.

Reader—Is the Rock of Gibraltar regarded as a province of England?—It is technically called a Crown colony of England. The governor who is also the commander-in-chief, exercises all the functions of government and legislation.

D. C.—Has the government of Switzerland floated a bond issue in the United States recently?—An 8 percent issue was recently offered in the United States.

Friend—Was E. H. Moore, manager of Governor Cox's campaign for the nomination for president, ever hired by the liquor interests of Ohio?—He was retained by the liquor interests in the Mahoning valley to fight their legal battles. He was elected mayor of Youngstown on a wet platform. Moore has managed the wet campaign in every election in which those interests were involved in his city and county and section of Ohio.

Mrs. Johnson was using the kerosene cook stove when it exploded and soon had her home in flames. Before assistance could be obtained to extinguish the blaze, the fire had spread and soon several buildings were enveloped.

A small damage was sustained by the Lake Erie Railroad station and the Methodist church.

The Milton fire crew overcame the fire without outside assistance.

Which?

A 1000 per cent Investment

That's the way to look at painting—as an investment, not an expense. Look around you at the houses going to rack and ruin. What is doing it? The weather. There is only one defense against weather and that is paint. But paint, like weather, is of many kinds. Beware of the fair weather paint. It does not protect, it only deceives. Buy a paint that has proved its staying power.

SWP (Sherwin-Williams House Paint, Prepared) has a fifty-year record. Its ingredients are what experience has proved to be most efficient in protecting property. It puts an armor between your buildings and the elements and also adds beauty and cleanliness.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

BROWS IN THE INFINITE If everybody thought the same and had the same ideas about everything, this would be a dead world. All initiative would be gone. And it wouldn't be long before this delightful Earth of ours would look like the Moon does under the telescope.

The Creator made us all different. There are not two faces or two brains in the world alike. At heart, however, the whole world feels the same. In form and substance we are all alike—made in the image of Him who created us.

We live in a world of contrasts—and among people who are our opposites and contradictions.

This gives each one of us, however, no matter of what origin, our right to aspire to what we wish—and to achieve our desires if we have the will and the mettle.

Any man may walk humbly, serenely, outside of all applause—with his feet on everyday ground, but with his brow in the Infinite.

It is a sufficient thing that he may be said of any man that he walked far ahead of his time or his age—and was a leader. The epitaphs of such figures need but a single line to take them into the following centuries.

Recently I read the story of a great artist, and this is what the author said summed up his life: "He painted what he saw." Many years ago, I read the life story of Henry Ward Beecher, and this was the heading of one of the chapters: "He preached Christ!"

Like some tall towering cliff, do the deeds and finished works of some men stand out. Brows in the Infinite!

You are limited only by your aspirations. No one may keep you from doing—and daring. Have the courage to think differently. Be a YOU man—a YOU woman.

Let your brows touch the Infinite!

Dinner Stories

The train wreck occurred just two miles west of a small Missouri town and the editor of the local paper sent out his star (and only) reporter to get a story of the accident. Arrived at the scene of the wreck, the reporter found the train crew reluctant to talk for publication. Finally the conductor of the train candidly confessed that it was against the policy of the road to give out particulars of such accidents. "However," he concluded, "over there, sitting on that tie, is the superintendent of this division. If he wants to tell you anything, why, all right."

The reporter approached the designated man and found him with his face badly scratched and one arm in a sling. "Can you give me any particulars concerning this wreck?" the reporter asked.

"Wreck?" repeated the injured man. "Young fellow, if there has been any wreck on this road I haven't heard of it!"

The minister was giving the newly married couple some excellent advice for their guidance in matrimonial life.

"Pay attention to me," he said. "You must never get cross with one another. Always try to do everything in such a way that there is no unpleasantness for either of you. It is the husband's duty to protect his wife, and a wife must always obey her husband, and follow him in the walks of life."

"But, sir," interrupted the young wife. "I have not finished," said the minister. "She must always—"

"But, please, sir," broke in the young woman once more in desperation, "can't you alter that last part—about the walks of life? My Joe is a country postman?"

ARE YOU WORKING? IF SO, WHY?

Why work? It isn't fashionable. Hardly anybody is doing it any more. Sit still and enjoy the high cost of living.

And the longer you sit still and enjoy it, the higher it will go. Everybody is profiteering now except yourself.

You can become a profiteer very easily; oh, yes, indeed.

As soon as you stop working and sit down, you are one. And one of the worst ones in the business.

Join the vast, innumerable throng. Sit still and enjoy the H. C. L. Be one of the elect.

Memories of Old Days

In This Paper Ten Years Ago Today

For a consideration of $210,000 practically all of the 12,000 shares of stock of the Richmond Natural Gas company were transferred by the old stock holders to C. W. Hooven, of Anderson, Henry C. Starr, of Chicago, and J. P. and W. W. Goodrich, of Winchester.

It was announced that in order to encourage the merchant of Richmond to decorate during the Fall Festival, silver cups would be offered by the decoration committee as prizes for the most attractive interior and exterior store and window furnishings.

LOSS AND DAMAGE MEN HAVE SHIPPERS' CO-OPERATION

"The Loss and Damage Prevention Committee of the Richmond Division of the Pennsylvania railroad, has been receiving splendid co-operation from the shippers," said James E. Kirkpatrick, member of the committee, Friday.

Kirkpatrick said the committee was in operation before government control of railroads, and was re-organized after March 1. He says the committee studies the faults of carriers and shippers. When a shipper is found that ships poorly packed goods, he is notified.

FOREMAN LARGEST PLANT ITS KIND IN ALL THE WORLD

Mr. Lester Oliver, of Ball Bros. Glass Mfg. Co., declares the new medicine, Dreco, has done his wife a great amount of good.

Relieved nervous headaches, overcame constipation, cleansed her liver, banished dizzy spells and strengthened the kidneys.

There is hardly a home in the U. S. A. but what knows the "Mason Fruit Jar" made by Ball Bros. Glass Mfg. Co., of Muncie, Ind. In this giant plant there is a man named Mr. Lester Oliver, who has been there three years as foreman and who resides at 2200 Godman's Ave., Muncie.

Mr. Oliver says: "My wife has been sick for some time and could not find the right medicine to get her well. One day she read about the new medicine, Dreco, and felt that she wanted to give it a trial. Her liver was sluggish and gave her headaches, dizzy spells and she could see spots floating before her eyes. Her bowels were constipated and her kidneys caused her to get up several times during the night. Her whole system was frail and rundown."

"She has now taken two bottles of Dreco and it is astonishing how this medicine has helped her. It is easy to see her improvement and she is feeling so much better. Her liver has been cleansed off so that she no longer gets dizzy, nor ever has a headache. Bowels act regular every day and her kidneys are so much stronger that she never gets up a single time during the night now. She feels good, has a fine appetite; nerves are quieted; has a good color—in fact, she thinks Dreco the greatest medicine she ever took."

Dreco is composed of the juices and extracts of many different roots, herbs, barks and leaves, which act on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and purify the blood. It relieves constipation, prevents gas forming in the stomach, increases the appetite, insures sound, refreshing sleep, banishes catarrh of the head, and takes the pain out of rheumatic joints.

All good druggists now sell Dreco and it is highly recommended in Richmond by Clem Thistlethwaite's seven drug stores.—Advertisement.

Cox's Chances of Winning the Presidency

While Senator Capper's Topeka Capital (Rep.) considers Republican victory at the polls not even in question, declaring that "after November the Democrats will know that a political party cannot carry a presidential election in this country by sprinkling a little booze on its clothes," other Republican papers agree with the New York Tribune that it "would be most foolish if they (Senator Harding's supporters) did not frankly recognize the formidableness of the Cox and Roosevelt ticket." The Chicago Tribune (Rep.) says that the bosses nominated Governor Cox because they thought he was "the best vote-getter and the best goat-getter Democracy had."

If you would obtain a practical idea of Governor Cox's chances of winning the election, as pointed out by newspaper editors of all shades of political opinion, you will do well to read THE LITERARY DIGEST for this week—July 17th. The leading article is a careful summary of American newspaper opinion of the Democratic nominee and the advantages and disadvantages that will be his during the campaign.
