Jones Describes His Trip To Jamaica; Says Work Of Friends Is Progressing

In the Earhart Conference number of the American Friend, published this week, Sylvester Jones, field secretary of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, gives a very vivid account of his trip to Jamaica recently.

"Two things," said Mr. Jones, "especially impressed me in connection with our work in Jamaica. First, the large number of people, and the number is constantly growing, with those who come in contact with the mission.

Second, the greatest power and careful thinking which the missionaries bring to bear upon their problems and the united front which they present in the practical working out of those problems. They are doing a great work and doing it together."

He tells of the scenes at the wharf when landing, the large crowds in which the blacks predominate; Anglo-Saxons mostly helmeted in white; songs and shouts of the numerous boys and men swimming about the vessel eager to dive for coins. Describing a fellowship meeting with the East Indian coolies, he writes: "About 40 adults were present, all but four of whom came barefooted. Their plainness of dress did not, however, extend to every detail. Some barefooted Indians had upon their persons silver ornaments of very unusual value, representing the savings for years."
