Solving the Present City Problem

The decision of council to defer its inquiry into the actions and conduct of Mayor Zimmerman until the citizen's committee makes a report was wise and diplomatic.

This committee, as its spokesman said last night, holds no brief for Mayor Zimmerman, but is intent upon solving a municipal problem that has become acute. Hence, an impartial and constructive report may be expected.

The investigation of the physical condition of Mayor Zimmerman by a committee of citizens and an interview with that official regarding his attitude toward the disturbed municipal government will go a far way in quieting the troubled waters.

The co-operative effort of this committee should not be construed by citizens to mean that the necessity of a change in the municipal government of Indiana cities has been removed. Conditions here had attained what citizens believed was a critical stage and the committee's efforts will be directed toward making the best of a situation until the state legislature may enact legislation at its next session giving Indiana cities home rule.

One of the noticeable features of last night's meeting was the large attendance of citizens, suggesting that if normally meetings were attended by as many citizens some legislation would be speeded up.

City Attorney Robbins was not far from wrong when he said that the citizens themselves are partly to blame for conditions here. Our apathy toward the municipal government, our lack of interest in the proceedings of the council and board of works, our willingness "to let the city run itself" may account for the slipshod manner in which our city's business is sometimes conducted.

If some of us took a greater personal interest in public affairs and assumed the personal responsibility we owe to our community, our city would be infinitely better off.

Memories of Old Days

In This Paper Ten Years Ago Today

An invitation to the 14th convention of the League of American Municipalities at St. Paul, Minn., was received by the local city administration. Many of the best authorities in America were to discuss many subjects of municipal importance, which were home rule for cities, government by commission, simplified city government, city art museums, street paving problems, what other cities are doing, and lines in which some cities excel.

DEFER ACTION

The new rates the plant would be assured a good profit this year. He related in detail numerous disputes between the board and the council the past two and a half years, asserting that in every instance the men he referred to as "obstructionists" had attempted to defeat carefully formulated plans for municipal betterments.

"These three or four men have systematically and continuously pursued obstructive tactics," Mr. Robbins said, adding that as a result the board had found it almost impossible to act.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

THE POLICEMAN

There is no finer public servant than the policeman. Night and day he is on the job. He is our servant—but a servant by choice!

One word expresses the average policeman—fearlessness. But there is another word which ought to be wrapped around this one to make it complete. It is—faithfulness.

Whether it rains or shines, it is all the same to the policeman. He is not a deserter. You will see him at his post, or on his beat.

A few years ago a policeman in a large city went wrong, and there were pages of print about the case from one end of the country to the other. He paid the extreme penalty for his errors. But every day all over the country, other policemen are paying for their faithfulness and honor with their lives—lost while on duty.

It is to such that I would like to pay a simple tribute—for they are too soon forgotten as examples of the heroic in our everyday, busy business lives.

In one of the largest cities of America there used to be a statue erected to a group of brave policemen who lost their lives battling for the public good. But it was removed from the busy street—where it should have stayed forever—to some less valuable spot.

Not long ago I read a short item about a New York policeman who fell, mortally wounded, defending the honor of his chosen calling. I wish that he might have had a statue of bronze placed at the spot where he fell.

The policeman is the embodiment of the highest results of democracy—for he sees that the law is given its just respect.

I like to see citizens friendly to the policeman. Their lot is hard and long. They sacrifice much to serve. As a rule, they are just and fair. And they willingly give all that they have when danger threatens.

Let us give three cheers in our hearts for the policeman—no matter where he stands.

Dinner Stories

Breathlessly the spiritualistically-inclined lady bent over the outfit spelling out the communications from her departed spouse.

"John, are you happy there?" she asked.

"Yes, dear."

"Are you happier than you were on the earth?"

"Yes, dear."

"Ah," she breathed. "Heaven must be a wonderful place."

"I guess so, but I'm not there yet."

"I had a bird dog once," the old sportsman observed, "that was really noteworthy. He never failed on a point. One day I had him out for exercise in the park, when suddenly he pointed, rigid as a stone. I was puzzled. There was no possibility of game. The grass was close clipped. The dog had his nose straight on a man seated on a bench. I thought the man might have a live bird in his pocket, but no, the man was in his shirt sleeves. Then I had an idea.

"Pardon me, sir," I said, "but would you mind telling me your name?"

"No, I don't mind," he replied. "It's Partridge."

Good Evening

A REFORMED REFORMER.
I used to think that I was quite a pitiless reformer. In all the hot crusades on vice, no one than I was warmer. I saw a one-piece bathing suit—a modern Venus in it. I quit reforming. I can't find a word to say again it.

Immigrant families from South America are bringing in great rolls of money, sometimes hundreds of thousands of dollars. One suspects that they intend to rent a flat.

PERSONAL PREJUDICES.
I pity a man who hides his light under a bushel all the time, but I despise the man who can't find the bushel when it is proper to douse the glim temporarily.

I go to the movies frequently in hot weather. Some of them offer a cool place to sit down and think about something else.

I am sorry Ambassador Davis was not mentioned more prominently at the San Francisco convention. I wanted to find out who he was.

I am prepared to face the worse and take the great risk which has been thrust upon us, of being obliged to have a change of administration. I don't think the heart of the world has been broken or will be broken, because in my opinion, it is made of mayor was a very sick man, that he did not believe in "jumping on a man when he was down," and declared that "the mayor certainly has been in tough luck." The latter remark caused the audience to roar with laughter.

H. R. Robinson, chairman of the citizens' committee, addressed council and explained that his committee had suggested postponement of the proposed action against the mayor until the committee had an opportunity of consulting with Dr. Zimmerman.

Circuit Court

Hearing of the partition suit venue here from Union county was begun before Judge Bond Friday. L. H. Stanford is representing the defendant, Alfred Henderson et al. The plaintiff, Mary Sullivan, is represented by Judge A. C. Lindemuth and Attorney Connor. The suit involves the construction of a will. The evidence introduced Friday was mostly of record.

Reputation Built on Merit

THERE is nothing temporary in the leadership which Ajax Cord Tires have won. It is quality leadership earned through merit; a natural tribute to the longer life, better looks and surer service built into Ajax Cords.

The Cleated Tread of the Ajax Cord is an assurance of security. Those cleats do hold—just like the cleats on an athlete's shoes.

Every Ajax Tire has Ajax Shoulders of Strength—buttresses of pliant rubber that reinforce the Tread. They give greater strength where strain is most severe.

Quality marks the whole Ajax line—Ajax Cord Tires, Ajax Road King (fabric) Tires, Ajax Inner Tubes and Ajax H. Q. (High Quality) Tire Accessories.
