Well Known Author Tells Of Nine Kinds of Humor

ST. LOUIS—Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pigs is Pigs," was in St. Louis recently on his way east from Montana, where he had been gathering material for a new book. To the St. Louis Times he let out a few secrets of the modern humorists. He said:

"You know you can get just as big a laugh by poking a baby in the ribs as you can by composing the finest line in the world. There isn't much degree in laughter. Humor is largely mechanical. It has certain paces, rules and systems.

"The first method of humor is a breezy exaggeration, a la Mark Twain. It predominates with the Yankees.

"The second is founded on a person's real or feigned ignorance. Almost all child humor is founded upon the child's ignorance of something we fully understand.

"Third, there is the naive mode which Barrie so generously employs in his early Scotch stories.

"Fourth, there is the ridiculous, calling direct attention to something we consider impossible with ourselves—the fat man in a silk hat on a slippery pavement, for instance.

"Fifth, the repetition of something more or less unexpected, like 'Pigs is Pigs.'

"Sixth, the sudden letdown from the extremely serious to the extremely frivolous. This also was one of the methods Mark Twain employed to make people laugh.

"Seventh, the use of extreme analogy mostly used by cartoonists.

"Eighth, the more or less disguised practical joke practiced principally in state comedies, such as the custard pie in the face and other ludicrous concoctions.

"Ninth, the gradual expansion of anything that has ridiculous possibilities.

"Lastly, intemperately, untimeliness, something that has no particular humor in itself, happening at an opportune time—malapropos humor. For example, things happening at a funeral a wedding, a christening, or any gathering of a serious nature."

STILL THE FASHIONABLE BLOUSES REACH TO THE HIPS

New fall blouses are displayed in the shop windows along with the advance fall suits and the main feature of these new blouses is the length. The tucked blouse is seldom seen. Everything that is smartest is the over-blowse of hip length. In some instances the blouse reaches to the natural waistline, but ends there and is worn outside the skirt. Sometimes it reaches far below the hips in a more Cassandre-like effect, but the hip length blouse is the favored style. Here is pictured one of each style and it is a difficult task to choose between them, although each one might be used for distinctly different occasions.

ADVANCE QUARTET FEATURES FIRST 2 DAYS; DR. STEWART TAKES DR. TINDLEY'S PLACE

The 'Adanac male quartet which opened the musical program of the Chautauqua Sunday afternoon, and gave the program Sunday evening is one of the finest male quartets ever heard in Richmond. The personnel consists of four artists, each of whom had a splendid voice.

Ruthven McDonald, the father of the quartet, organized it in London in 1912 and it has been traveling in England, the United States and Canada ever since. Mr. McDonald is the basso. He is a Victor artist and has made two records for the Starr machine. Incidentally he had a son who spent five years in the war. Mr. McDonald has taken 12 transcontinental tours.

All of the men are Canadians with the exception of Albert Downing, who is an Englishman. Mr. Downing is second tenor. Riley Hallman is first tenor and Marley Sherris is the baritone.

Go to Ludington From Here. When the quartet leaves Richmond it goes to Ludington, Mich. They have a 27 weeks' engagement through the Canadian west and a 12 weeks' engagement with the Red Path, beginning June, 1921. They are a jolly crowd and one knows that their music is a joy to them.

The voices blend beautifully and so far their programs have met with the greatest approval of the Chautauqua patrons. Sunday afternoon as a prelude to the Sunday lecture, a sacred program was given.

Sunday evening they appeared in Scottish costumes, Mr. McDonald said that their costumes cost them $105 when they bought them, which is extraordinarily cheap now. Their program consisted of lovely Scottish ballads which always delight an audience. They opened with "Scotts' Wha' Hae." "Annie Laurie," was one of the most beautiful numbers of the program. "March of the Guard" by Geibel, "The Two Files," "Kentucky Babe" and "Nearer My God to Thee" were other quartet numbers.

"Mighty Deep" Well Received. "The Mighty Deep" by Mr. McDonald, was received enthusiastically as have all the numbers by the audience. His encored were "Chip of the Old Block" and "Tommy Lad." Mr. Downing sang "Annabelle Lee" with "Sorter Miss You" as an encore. "Killers March" and "Lasse O'Mine" were numbers sung by Mr. Sherris.

Mr. Hallman sang "Mary of Argyle" and "A Farewell."

Each artist has an especial sweetness and charming quality that delights his hearer and each exhibits a finished technique.

Monday afternoon the program consisted of "The Old Brigade" by Barri, "The Frog," and "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginia." Mr. Hallman sang "Down in the Forest," Mr. McDonald "The Horn," Mr. Sherris, "On the Road to Mandalay," and Mr. Downing, "The Mountain Lovers."

Miss Marjorie Beck of this city, an accomplished pianiste, is accompanying the quartet, which was invited to sing at the Starr Piano company Monday morning.

The program Monday evening will be made up of request numbers.

Record-Crowds Sunday. The opening of the Richmond Chautauqua Sunday exceeded any record of attendance with nearly 8,000 persons present. The tent was completely filled by 1 p. m., and people crowded within 20 feet of the tent. A larger attendance than ever before is expected to be the record for this year.

Announcement was made Sunday evening that George R. Stewart, of Birmingham, Ala., will take the place of Dr. Charles A. Tindley, who was compelled to cancel all engagements. Mr. Stewart is well known to Richmond audiences. He is a co-worker of Sam Jones.

The program for Tuesday follows: 10:00 a. m.—Dr. Francis, "Diversification in Sources of Study."

11:00 a. m.—Dr. Rees, "The League and the Treaty."

2:00 p. m.—Dr. Francis, "The Visual in Education."

3:00 p. m.—Concert Volunteers of America.

7:00 p. m.—Prelude, Volunteers of America.

8:00 p. m.—Evan Davies, Humorist, baritone and impersonator.

"A professor and his wife" have placed $50,000 in the hands of the authorities of Cornell University.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Persons camping at the Chautauqua grounds who wish to have the Palladium delivered will be served by a carrier-boy of the regular force. Those who wish the paper delivered at the grounds are requested to call the Palladium circulation manager at 2834.
