TRY TO STRAIGHTEN OUT A TANGLED WILL CASE IN PREBLE CO.

EATON, O., Aug. 28.—Sale of the entailed estate of his late wife, Minnie, is sought in a petition filed in common pleas court by John A. Swafford. The estate embraces a half interest in a 108-acre farm in Dixon township.

Swafford's wife, who died July 20, last, left a will, in which he was bequeathed a life estate in all her estate, real, personal and mixed. She also devised several legacies, all to be paid after her husband's death.

By terms of his wife's will, Swafford was to pay the taxes and keep in repair the 108-acre farm, in his application for authority to sell the farm he claims he is not physically able to oversee the farm and that the repairs now necessary on the farm would take much of the income from it. He avers a good price can be obtained for the farm at this time.

Legacies in the following amounts are left to the following persons: Sue Dowdy, $200; Edith Beasley, Filena Harvey, Anna Whitesell, Josiah Swafford and Lizzie Swafford, $500 each. Ambrose and Ezra Toney, Ellen Druley and Grace Parker are given $250 each, and Gladys O'Neil, $100. Lizzie Swafford's legacy is to lapse if she is not living at the time of distribution, after sale of realty after John A. Swafford's death. Josiah Swafford's legacy is to go to his heirs after his death. The legatees are sisters, nephews and nieces of the testatrix, excepting Sue Dowdy, who is designated as "my good friend."

The will bears date of July 7, 1920, having been executed 13 days before the testatrix's death. To the will was added a codicil, explaining that the testatrix had since executing her will come into possession, by deed, of a half interest in the home property, West Main street, Eaton. Her interest she devised to her brother, Quincy Flora, for life, and then to go to his daughter, Hilda Flora.

Want Light Injunction Dissolved. Motion has been filed in common pleas court to dissolve a temporary injunction granted John and Irene O'Dea against the Liberty Light & Power company and George Fortney, superintendent for the company in New Paris.

The O'Deas obtained the injunction upon the grounds that the company was erecting poles and proceeding to string wires on and over lands owned by the plaintiffs in New Paris.

Upon its request, the New Paris Equity exchange has been made a party defendant to the suit.

In an answer to the complaint of the O'Deas, the light and power company claims the O'Deas have no interest in the realty involved; that those from whom the equity company obtained title were in possession of the land for 40 years prior to bringing of the suit, which is adverse to any claims of the O'Deas or those from whom they may claim they obtained title.

The enjoined transmission line was being erected to furnish electric current to the plant of the equity exchange.

The Diary of an Engaged Girl

By Phyllis Phillips

September 2.—Had a letter from Jack this morning, and he seems very pleased with the results of his trip out west. He was rather reticent about himself, personally, and seemed to be upset as he wrote. However, it's foolish to get into a stew, six inches and miles away, so I forced myself to laugh down my own fears, and be happy just to have heard from him at all.

Cecilia and Jeffrey have gone to Kew Gardens for the day, and so mother and I are left to regale each other as best we can. She wants me to go to see the Tower of London with her, but much as I hate to refuse, I just know that that would put the lid on my spirits for the rest of the day. I don't beg off and write a long letter to my Jack, and read his over again, and then maybe go out and take a walk by myself. I feel happiest when so doing. Anyway, an engaged girl who is love-sick, homesick, and everything else, is not a fit companion for any happy person.

Well, I had a very quiet morning with my own thoughts. Found them worth rescuing from the slough of despond, and pulled myself together just in time.

Lectured myself severely for being a fretful, peevish and totally selfish girl for not going along with dear little mother, and also reproached myself for giving way to gloom for the past week or two, specially as this was taken on my account, mostly! I have determined, to be better by it, and all the dear ones concerned.

Had a lovely lunch, then strolled out. Turned into Kensington Gardens, and sat down on one of the iron seats, under a tree, and as I did so, a young fellow, who was sitting on the seat next to mine, with his back turned, however, and lost in his own thoughts evidently, wheeled about as he heard me scurrying down, and I was looking once more into Cecilia's eyes!

But such a Cecil! I gasped his name out in horror, for he had lost all his pep, and looked black round the eyes, and wretchedly dissipated in every possible way. Still the sight of him warmed my heart a lot.

He put out one hand and touched mine. "Just to see if you're real," he explained in a tired voice. "Several persuasive tones. 'Tell me why you are here, what you have been doing to make such a mess of your beauty.' 'Beauty,' he laughed cynically.

Heart Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Something new was introduced to a very handsome and attractive man by a friend of mine. Later I learned he had a wife and four children, and this girl knew it. I no longer go with either of them, but I cannot forget the man.

The same girl introduced him to another of my girl friends, and although I have told her the story, she still continues to go about with him, and they act as if they were just married. His wife lives in another city and I feel sure she knows nothing about his conduct. I have talked to the man and the girl, but the answer of both is the same: "There is no harm being done."

If I had not known that this man was married I could have loved him better than anyone else in the world, but my own heart tells me how I would feel if I were his wife.

His wife is very attractive and his children are beautiful. It would be such a pity for her to find out these things. What is to be done when the conscience of both seems to be dead? They are too wrapped up in each other to even think of what might be the consequences.

Isn't there some way to stop it? I know what will be the end if his wife finds out, and it breaks my heart the suffering it will cause all the parties mentioned, even though some of them deserve to suffer.

THE FRIEND. You are breaking your heart over something which no longer concerns you. Your obligation ended when you stopped going with the man yourself, because you learned that he was married. It was also right for you to tell the other girl that the man was married. I question the wisdom, however, of further expressing your opinion by advising the two parties concerned as to their conduct.

Trust to a higher power to straighten this tangle. Think no more about the man. To covet him in your thoughts is evil, too. Try never to think of things you would not be willing to have your actions carry out.

Women Should Take Warning

If the statement made at a New York Assembly of women, that healthy American women are so rare that they are almost extinct, is true, acts, dragging down nervousness, mental depression that are tell-tale symptoms of some organic derangement for which Lydia E.
