VELVET AND DUVETYN HATS VIE FOR FIRST PLACE THIS FALL

The hat at the upper right is a youthful and jaunty model made of tan duvetyne embroidered in gold thread. It is a variation of the tan shape and is one of the most popular of the new styles. Just below it is a black velvet turban, a shape which always holds its own in every season. This one is coquettishly trimmed with one long ostrich plume placed at a smart angle at the back and drooping over the cheek. The smart little turban at the lower left is brown velvet with the pleated brim embroidered in gold yarn and two gold tassels to form the trimming. This makes a very neat little hat for the school girl and may be worn now or later. It is good for wear with either suit or coat and is especially youthful and charming. Black velvet makes the hat at the upper left. A wreath of velvet leaves edged with silver encircles the crown and the silver also edges the brim. This hat is smart for formal and afternoon wear.

served. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Crossley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Varman, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Griffith, Mrs. Middlesworth, Mrs. Jay Ballenger, Mrs. Robert Wilson, Miss Fay Crossley, Mr. Raymond Griffith, Miss Katherine Crossley, Miss Bernice Crossley, Miss Marie Crossley, Miss Ruth Griffith, Miss June Griffith, Miss Margaret Wilson, Miss Maria Wilson, Miss Evelyn Middlesworth, John Crossley, William Crossley, Melvin Wilson, Robert Wilson and Alpheus Warman.

Furs and Mystery

By PALAIS ROYAL

There are many following these articles who have gained the impression that we believe this store is the only store dealing honestly with the public in the matter of furs.

We are glad to say that this is not the case—there are concerns who feel about the fur business just as we do—that the public should be told just what each particular fur is even though it be an imitation. These firms are glad to see an expose made of the tricks of the unscrupulous fur dealer, and never willingly mislead the public regarding furs either in their advertisements or in the selling of the garments. Occasionally, however, the honest fur dealer is compromised through the ignorance of some of his salespeople.

Aside from the determination to be strictly honest, these fur dealers know that to remain in business for long it is absolutely necessary that the public get exactly what it pays for and that while for the time being sales and profits might be larger if they resorted to deception—in the end they will profit far more greatly if they treat the public honestly.

If you are buying a substitute, or imitation fur, what interests you most is what you pay for it. In good fur shops you pay its real worth. It is of real value for its own sake. But if the dealer begins to refer to it as some special kind of seal, or other costly skin, put it down in your little book that there are other furs in the same collection being offered for what they are not. It's like "Japanese" crab meat—which is a good quality of cod-fish.

Of course there are many concerns, both large and small, which will never be entirely honest till compelled to be by law. These same firms prefer to sell their garments by deception whenever necessary to make the sale, either making an adjustment or taking back the garments should the purchaser ever learn the deception.

We can suggest but one way to avoid this latter class of fur dealers—when you start out to shop for furs, choose your fur dealer much as you would a security for the safe investment of your money.

HAY FEVER

Chiropractic has been successful in removing the cause of hay fever to a large degree. In my practice I have seen it abated in the majority of instances, permitting the patient to remain at his work with but little annoyance, while in other instances a full restoration to normal conditions prevailed with no return symptoms. Sufferers should not wait until the attack develops, but take chiropractic in advance of the time the attack usually appears. After the case develops it is, of course, more difficult to handle. Those who are unable to leave business for the lakes will find that chiropractic offers a degree of relief that will be gratifying in the majority of instances.
