As a general thing, I do not believe it is a good idea to leave salt water in the hair. But I do not believe, either, that salt water "rots" the hair, as some people say. Too much water is bad for the scalp and the hair simply because it dries out all the natural oils which feed the roots and which produce new growth and lustre and color.

But salt is an excellent tonic both internally and externally, and few people seem to recognize this. For one thing, salt is antiseptic. A daily gargle with hot salt water will strengthen the throat, and will cure the early stages of a cold, and often prevent colds and sore throat.

Last week I talked about the value of hot and cold water baths and of salt water as a complexion treatment—for tightening loose skin, smoothing lines, clearing and refreshing the complexion. And now I want to suggest an occasional salt tonic for the hair.

Salt water is drying—but there are times when the scalp needs something drying and astringent. If the scalp is too oily, you can stand a wash with hot salt water by itself. But if the scalp is normal, or dry—or if it is full of dandruff—the best thing is to combine oil with the hot salt tonic.

I would suggest, for instance, rubbing the scalp full of oil the night before the salt shampoo—rascene, olive oil, crude oil or sulphur ointment. Then wash with clear water and soap, then wash again with clear hot salt water, rubbing dry powdered table salt over the scalp. Rinse in hot salt water, then cold salt water—and let it dry. Next day, rinse out the salt water with clear hot and then clear cold water.

Marie H.—I should not advise massaging the busts at all, as you may bruise them without realizing it. If you use very warm cocoa butter on them every night, they will find nourishment by absorbing this oil. It is bought in a cake at any drug store and can be used directly from the cake, as the heating is very simple—you merely hold the cake an instant before the electric lamp or any other light. You are a brunette. Your weight should be 125 pounds.

Z. Z. Z.—A good pimple paste can be made by taking flour of sulphur and plain wheat flour and mixing the two together, then making a paste with clear water. Apply to the pimples on going to bed and let it remain on the face overnight. The ingredients may be in equal parts, though more or less either way, will not spoil the effect. The sulphur purifies and the wheat flour acts as a paste, which holds the sulphur together. Often pimples become chronic, because of a microbe that has been transmitted through former pimples and is now lodged in the skin. Such pimples will be cured through this sulphur treatment. After applying the paste, cover the part with

Heart Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man twenty-three years of age and have been married. I have one little boy. My husband and I have not lived together for three years and I have not heard from him in that time.

I have been going with a young man twenty years old, whom I love very much and he does me. He tells me he does and he used to write to me every day, but now it is not quite so often as he is at work. He wants me to get a divorce and says we will get married. He says he is lonesome without me and wants me to come to his home and stay on a visit until I get my divorce paid for. Then we will get married.

Do you think he loves me or not? What should I do? He has turned down all of his people two or three times for me.

THANK YOU.
The boy may love you, but I do not believe it will be a lasting love. At the age of twenty a young man does not know his own mind and he is most apt to have the fire of his love burn out or turn in another direction.

You are very young and have much happiness ahead of you if you do the right thing and do not make another unwise choice. It seems to me that it would be a great mistake to marry a young man of twenty, not only because his love may not be constant, but because he is too young to assume the responsibilities of marriage and to earn a living wage.

Love the young man, and let him love you if he wants to, but insist upon waiting a year or two until both of you are more sure that marriage is the right course.

some absorbent cotton which will hold the treatment in place over the night. A blackhead cleanser is made from two parts corn starch, one part borax and one part almond meal. This is a powder and should be mixed together, after which it is used as a soap, by sprinkling some on the washcloth that has been moistened ready for cleansing the skin.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So, if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

From the maple groves of Vermont and Canada comes the rich flavor of the new Karo Maple

Delicious maple flavor and moderate price sold over five million cans of Karo Maple last year. A money-saving hint to many mothers

Over a thousand tons of the purest and finest flavored maple sugar are used annually to make Karo Maple delicious enough to be the preference of those who enjoy maple syrup.

The world's largest users of maple sugar are the makers of Karo Maple. Karo Maple outsells, by far, every kind of maple syrup.

The price is remarkably moderate—economical enough to serve daily to all the family.

Serve it to the children on their bread, and to all the folks on waffles, griddle cakes, or crisp, buttered toast.

Our belief that you will like Karo Maple equally as well as millions of others is best expressed by the following suggestion:

Ask your grocer for Karo Maple in the GREEN CAN. It is guaranteed to please you or your grocer returns your money.
