BEAUTY CHATS

LONDON, October 25. One of the things I noticed when visiting the various beauty parlors here in London, is that so much of the work is done by men. I do not think that I have, so far, been in any place where the shampooing, hair treatment and hair dressing was not performed by a man. I asked one of them about it.

"We think over here," he said, "that a man is better fitted for work like this because he is much more apt to be in earnest. I am not casting any slur upon women as professional hairdressers, because they make very good ones, but a woman is quite apt to look upon work of this sort, or in fact, of any sort, as a means of temporary support until she marries. Whereas, if a man goes into work of this kind he must make it a life profession. He has to work always, so of course he will go into the study of his profession much more thoroughly."

"And in this profession it is particularly important that the hairdresser should know what he is about. There are some things that one can skim over the surface, but when one is handling anything as important as the hair, or the complexion, one should know what one is about."

That seemed a thoroughly logical answer to any objection I might have to men hairdressers. At home we are apt to think that a man, going into certain professions, must be effeminate, but I believe now that we are quite wrong. As far as these English hairdressers go, the head of one of the largest establishments in London told me that every man in his employ had been in service throughout the war, that several had been wounded, and about one out of every three had of shampoo and treatment you require, as the condition of the scalp changes.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So, if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

Indiana Woman's Testimony

South Bend, Ind.—"I thought there was no relief for me until I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For some time I suffered from organic trouble, with pains in my side, backache, and bearing pains. I was a miserable wreck, got so thin I only weighed ninety pounds. Since taking the 'Prescription' I now weigh 140 pounds, and do not have an ache or a pain, and am completely rid of all my ailments. Can do all my work and am strong and healthy."—Mrs. Theresa Wilkin-son, 622 N. Walnut St.
