EGYPT IS AFFECTED BY SLUMP IN COTTON

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 29—Extravagant speculation following the armistice was responsible for the advance in cotton prices in 1919, which carried the product 300 percent higher than normal, says a statement regarding the crisis in the cotton industry issued by the Egyptian government. The present world wide check in expenditures, it says, has arrested speculation and compelled the owners of cotton to enter the market.

"The United States," it continues, "which last year bought one-third of the Egyptian crop, is now taking only a very insignificant quantity. This is exercising a very depressing effect upon prices. Emphasis should be laid on the fact that the causes of the fall in quotations are economic and world wide, and therefore, outside the sphere of influence of the producing country."

"Present prices still leave a substantial profit for the cultivator who works his own land, but anybody remaining land on the basis of last year's prices will be faced by a great loss. If insolvency follows on a considerable scale it will affect most injuriously the country as well as the tranquility of the agricultural population."
