SINGER HERE MONDAY CUTS GERMAN OPERAS

Mme. Arendt who comes to Earlham college for a recital Monday night was requested by Prof. Garon to include on her program the "Ela's Dream" from the Opera Tannhauser by Wagner.

Mme. Arendt, who scored an unusual success in this opera in Berlin before coming to America to live, made the statement that she was through with German opera and German songs. The greater part of her program Monday night will be made up of English songs, although she will sing "The Hymn to the Sun" and "Enfant Prodiges" in French. There are a few choice seats still to be had by calling Prof. Garon at Earlham or Weisbrod's music store.

LOCAL MAN ENDS LIFE AT INDIANAPOLIS PARK

Fred W. Jones, 40 years old, was identified last night as the man who had ended his life Wednesday in Riverside park, Indianapolis, after removing all marks from his clothing that might lead to the establishment of his identity.

He is a son of Mrs. George Jones, 115 West Main street, this city. Jones had been manager of a dry cleaning store in Frankfort, Ky., for the last seven years. An Indianapolis newspaper obtained identification by securing a description of Jones through a lodge emblem which he wore and by tracing a label on a bottle found near the body to a store in Frankfort.

Besides his mother, two brothers and two sisters survive. No brother has been assigned for the deed. He visited relatives here last Thanksgiving day and seemed to be in good health.

The body was shipped to Richmond today. A sister positively identified the body at Indianapolis last night.

PUBLIC MAY WITNESS PLAY OF 'MILESTONES'

Tickets for "Milestones," a three-act play, by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblauch, to be given as the first production of "The Mask and Mantle," newly organized dramatic club of Earlham college on Saturday evening, Dec. 18, are now on sale at the college and at the Westcott pharmacy. Miss Jane Carpenter, Miss Helen Jessup, Miss Helen Johnson and Charles Robinson, are day student members of the club who have tickets for sale.

Rehearsals are being conducted daily under the direction of Mrs. H. R. Robinson, director of the club. "The Mask and Mantle" was organized under the auspices of the public speaking department of the college and is a production of the college community. All persons in town and in the college community interested in this sort of thing are urged to attend the premiere performance.

Persons who expect to attend "Milestones" are asked to buy their tickets before the play opens on Saturday evening at the Westcott and the Westcott pharmacy. Every effort is being made to give both the town and college patronage satisfactory seats.

AMERICANS IN HAITI ONLY ON BUSINESS

(By Associated Press.)
PORT AU PRINCE, Dec. 11.—Americans seldom come to Haiti except on business. It is the rarest thing to see a tourist here and ship travelers, stopping at this port for several hours, rush aboard again after a hurried visit to the water front section. The hordes of beggars besetting the visitors as they attempt to walk through well paved streets, lined with the lame and the blind discourages the visitors. The Chamber of Commerce, mindful of this evil, is trying to end it, for the thing that is the most annoying to the organization admits that it is the thing that the tourists away. Aside from the occupation forces there are about 200 Americans in the capital. Only four full steaming days from New York, Haiti is lucky if it gets mail in eight or 10 days.

The one hotel patronized by Americans sits back toward the base of the mountainside overlooking the sea and beyond walking distance of town. Once acclimated the resident American likes the weather, but these never was a sun in Texas that beats down with the intensity of this Haitian sun around midday.

The old belief held in many parts of the United States that Port au Prince is a breeding spot of crime is wrong now.

Warehouses and Storage Credits Are Part of Plan to Aid Farmers

Bernard M. Baruch has set forth in a report to the Kansas state board of agriculture a comprehensive plan for lifting American agriculture out of its present slough of despond and establishing it on a sound basis.

The report was made public recently. Its aim is to place the farmer as a producer on an equality with the man who buys his output, instead of leaving him, as he now is, at the mercy of the market. For achieving this Baruch outlines a system of warehousing and financing which would make it unnecessary for the farmer to sell on a glutted market and would tide him over periods of scarce money.

Baruch's study of the subject was called at the request of the Kansas state board of agriculture, which recognized that his experience as chairman of the war industries board and at the peace conference, as well as his business career, fitted him for constructive analysis of the situation. The subject of relief for agriculture has lately been before a conference of governors in Harrisburg, Pa., and committees of the United States senate.

In his preliminary investigations Baruch appeared personally several times before the Kansas board of agriculture, and later he conducted an exhaustive research into experiments in the field.

The cornerstone of Baruch's plan is a string of storage warehouses for farm products at primary points to carry the peak load in the distribution of cotton, wool, tobacco, grain and other commodities. These are to be built preferably by private capital, but the government is to be under state or federal supervision.

With such warehouses at his command the farmer, instead of throwing his output on the market when both money values and traffic conditions are adverse, will be able to store them until the market is favorable. They should be properly weighed, graded and certified, says Baruch, and against them should be issued warehouse receipts which may be negotiated by farmers on proper margins.

For the purpose of making loans on warehouse receipts Baruch proposes corporations, co-operative if desired, but not necessarily so, whose capital stock shall be open to public subscription. These could advance money to farmers on their notes, maturing at various dates, secured by warehouse receipts. There would then be issued against the notes bearer certificates in denominations of from $100 to $1,000 bearing attractive interest. Because of the interest and their security, since behind them would be the resources of the corporation, the individual credit of farmers and the receipts for goods warehoused and insured, the certificates should be easily salable.

Another step in Baruch's proposal is a system of market information for the farmer. He notes that the public is kept informed through the department of agriculture of crop conditions. He suggests that through the same department the farmer be kept informed of conditions in all the markets of the world, posted daily, bi-weekly or weekly in all postoffices or printed in periodicals of wide circulation, would enable the farmer to market his goods to the best advantage.

Care must be taken, either in collective marketing or in collective buying, says Baruch, "that the power which would come into the hands of agencies established for the purposes is not abused." Collective buying by farmers, Baruch also ought to be suggested for the time being to staples.

One phase of the problem of distribution, the handling of products in the city, Baruch suggests, may have to be undertaken by the city dwellers themselves. It is in the transfer of products from the farm to the city dweller that the greatest increases in price are made. This becomes a question for settlement by the cities and apart from the subject which Baruch was asked to study.

The Farm and Farmer

By WILLIAM R. SANBORN

John Moster, of Jacksonville, says he has 2,000 bushels of good yellow corn in his cribs and has about 100 bushels more to shuck from the same 30-acre field. Moreover he has done his own shucking this year, as time and weather permitted.

Mr. Moster is secretary of the township federation and says they are planning on a field extra doings at the regular meeting to be held at Odd Fellows hall, Jacksonville, on Thursday evening, Dec. 30. Invitations to be present will be mailed out in a few days.

"We grew some fine watermelons up one way last year," said Charles Shutz, who lives 2 miles north of Hazleton, on the Dalton road. "Last summer, however, very few of our melons were good, but none of us could give a reason for it, except that rain may not have fallen at exactly the right time." At this point he produced four melons which weighed a fraction over 5 pounds, from a market basket, and laid them on our desk. He said that while one of these ears was a creamy white, the next a solid red, and two others a shaded mixture of both white and red. They were from the same field and from the same seed.

At the Farm Bureau convention at Indianapolis this week a North Dakota farmer said that nearly one-third of the farms in his county were being vacated this fall, mostly by renters. An informant tells us that this year, who at least will spend the winter months in the town or village.

Apples Pay $2,000 an Acre.
An orchardist living near Greenfield is said to have received close to $50,000 for his 1920 crop of apples. Despite the large crop and comparatively low prices on apples, prevailing this year, it is said that he grew perfect fruit, and that he practically lived in his orchard of less than fifty acres, from the time the sap started. Our informant tells us that this orchard was worth a long journey to see, so perfect were the apples and so laden were the trees.

THE AL. BROKAMP SALE
Have you ever attended a farm sale where the family Collie was put up with the live stock and sold to the highest bidder? "Very seldom," you say. If you have seen the farm collie sold it was a sign that the folks were actually quitting farming, and were going to town to live, or on a journey to a far country.

Well, that kind of a case happened over in Darke county on Friday. The collie was advertised on the sale bill, and was auctioned off. It was at the Al. Brokamp sale, on the old Clate Richards farm, west of New Madison. The fact is Mr. Brokamp is quitting farming. His health isn't good and he is coming to Richmond to live. For the present at least the farm is without a tenant.

A Fair Crowd Present
A fair crowd of friends and neighbors were present and the bidding was lively, so much so that a cleanup was made before three o'clock. The ladies of the Hollansburg Grange served the lunch. P. C. King of the New Madison bank made the settlements and Col. Tom Conniff was auctioneer of the day.

Three horses and three cows were put up, also two good sows and sixteen head, the latter averaged $15 per head, all went to Oscar McClure.

WHEAT BREAKS SEVERE ON CHICAGO MARKET DURING LAST WEEK

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Severe breaks in wheat prices went hand in hand with a week ago, wheat this morning was down 6 3/4 to 9 3/10 cents; corn off 3 1/2 to 5 1/5c; oats, 1 5/8 to 2 1/4c and provisions 35 to 92c.

Although at first the wheat market had a noticeable upward tendency owing to conjectures that India would be a heavy importer of wheat and because of supposed congressional enactments touching rural products, depression quickly followed.

Causes of Reaction
New bank failures in North Dakota, including one federal reserve institution, led to uneasiness on the part of bulls, and so too did talk of arrangements for extensive hauling of wheat from Canadian railroad terminals to Minneapolis during the winter. Then came announcement of a 22 1/2 per cent wage cut for 500,000 textile workers with ensuing sharp downturn in the value of stocks, cotton, silver and sugar.

Notice was also taken of action of the federal reserve bank of Chicago toward obtaining liquidation of loans on the part of country banks. It was said also that flour trade both domestic and export was at the lowest ebb yet this season. On the other hand, export buying of wheat on the declines failed to act as much of a stimulus.

Corn and oats declined in sympathy with wheat. More liberal offering of corn from Nebraska was reported. Provisions followed the downward trend of grain and hogs. All beef and pork products reached the lowest wholesale price of the year.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Further extensive selling for both accounts, in which liquidation probably predominated, forced prices of many stocks to still lower levels for the year, the recurrent reaction coinciding with conditions in the commodities market. The steady reversal in leading branches of industry was revealed in the decreased tonnage statement of the United States Steel corporation for November, which exceeded all estimates and left unfilled orders at the smallest total of the year.
