Independence for the Philippines

The recommendation of President Wilson that congress grant independence to the people of the Philippine Islands was couched in such general terms that one infers that he believed the topic would hardly come before the present session. He voices a general principle without suggesting the terms upon which this independence is to be granted.

Representative Towner, chairman of the committee on insular affairs, says the inhabitants of these islands neither want nor demand independence in the sense in which we usually accept that term. He asserts that the islanders are seeking a definition of their status and are not demanding immediate action.

It seems almost impossible to believe that the majority of the Filipinos have received enough training in the forms of representative government to enable them to administer their affairs. Hardly 25 years have elapsed since America assumed responsibility for the islanders. Great strides have been made in the education and development of the natives, but it is inconceivable to believe that they have attained that stage in their development which would permit them to govern themselves or to cope with serious internal or international affairs.

The issue between the United States and Japan has ramifications which extend to the Philippine Islands, presenting complications that might become very awkward if the Filipinos were suddenly granted their independence. Leaders of congress are wisely withholding action on the recommendation until other issues have been settled and its members have time to study and debate the question.

Rippling Rhymes By WALT MASON

SUNSET OF LIFE

I'm waxing old. I've reached the gloaming, the coming night its shadow flings; and here I sit my whiskers combing, and moralizing on all things. The young go by, the dancers, laughers, the singers of life's morning hymn; and I'm unlike some other gaffers; for envy makes their eyes grow dim. Some graybeards watch the young in sorrow, and long to treat their shining ways, and sigh, "Youth always has tomorrow, but age has only yesterday." The wintry dusk seems rather tragic, but I would cry, "Nay, nay, my dear," if some kind fairy, with her magic, would take me back to yesterday. I once was young and full of trouble, in trackless wilds I went astray, and every bright hope proved a bubble, my idols all had feet of clay. I had no tranquil eves or mornings; all day a weary load I bore; the road was marked with solemn warnings left there by failures gone before. Oh, youth was full of fire and fever, and love was false and vows askew, and every hope was a deceiver, and only bitter dreams came true. And now I sit, with a valise of bottled grapejuice by my side; the closing hours are calm and peaceful, and slumber comes at eventide.

"See any fancy ridin' while you was east?" asked Three-Finger Sam.
"I sure did," answered Cactus Joe.
"But everything's topsy-turvy. People in the cars have to hang on with their wrists to straps."

"Jes' think of that. Usin' the stirrups for their hands instead of their feet!"

A north countryman, charged with having set fire to a large hayrick, was defended on the ground that he was not altogether responsible for his actions. One of the witnesses testified to the belief that the prisoner was "wrong in his head."

"Can you mention any occasion on which the prisoner behaved in a manner to warrant your statement?" he was asked by the learned counsel.

"Yes," answered the witness. "Once at work he got a dollar too much for his wages, an'—"

"Well?" said the counsel as the witness hesitated.

"He took it back to th' manager," concluded the witness.

And yet it seems a mystery. That Gene should be so high; He never studies, yet you see him always getting by!

RECOMMENDED TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

This is the season when children are subject to colds and coughs. Benj. C. Marchard, 36 Lawrence St., Salem, Mass., writes: "I used Foleys Honey and Tar with good results. I had a bad cold and it gave me relief at once. I recommended it to every child that goes to school." This standard, low priced medicine loosens and clears mucus and phlegm, checks straining, soothes and heals raw, inflamed membranes, and stops tickling in throat. A. G. Luken & Co., 630 Main.

The Call for Help

The hearts of thousands of the little children of Europe will be glad on Christmas, even if they do not have gifts such as their more fortunate brothers and sisters in this country will receive.

The food which they are receiving regularly from American relief stations must this year take the place of the customary Christmas gifts. These little ones are face to face with the grim issue of starvation. A meal means infinitely more to them than a toy.

Their hearts are filled today with gratitude which is inexpressible. But the small number that is being taken care of at the relief stations is only a small fraction of the millions that still lack sufficient food to prevent malnutrition. So far only the children who are in a deplorable state are receiving aid, while others, whose condition has not approached a critical stage, are forced to continue in their suffering.

America has been asked to raise about $23,000,000 for this relief work. Herbert Hoover is back of the movement. The appeal has been cast broadcast throughout the country. Responses so far have been generous, but they still are far short of the amount which is necessary to keep these children from starving to death or enduring agony that will leave them helplessly crippled for life.

No greater Christmas offering can be brought this year than to answer this appeal for aid. Christmas is day on which Christian countries, commemorating the nativity of the Christ, think of their children and shower upon them the gifts of love and affection.

Wherever a child is in want, mankind owes a duty of benevolence. In this instance, the sufferer is so general and the appeal so urgent that few of us should have the heart to ignore it or to turn a deaf ear to the call.

All of us hoped that misery and want would cease in the war-devastated countries shortly after hostilities ended. In this we were disappointed. The want today is as great, if not greater, than it was during the World war. Effective relief among the children this year will save the lives of millions.

About 10,000 persons were present to see 40 candidates initiated into the Modern Woodmen Lodge. There were a number of visitors from Indianapolis and Dayton, and from practically all of the small country towns. Following the degree work, Harry Wining, of Indianapolis, gave a stereopticon lecture on "Wood Craft of the Woodmen."

Ohio News Flashes

CHILLICOTHE.—Privates Denton and Hayes, firemen-janitors of Camp Sherman headquarters, were "a. w. l." when officials of the camp arrived at their offices. The steam radiators were dead and the rooms icy cold. "Count the days till we get back," read a note left by the triumphant. Military police squads are pursuing the delinquent heat purveyors, and if caught, officials say, the two privates will go into the guardhouse, with this remark: "Count the days till you get out."

FELICITY.—Charles Lytle, of Augusta, Ky., had an attack of heart trouble while driving his automobile, two miles east of this city. Mr. Lytle's machine ran over an embankment but was not damaged. He was found by Owen Moore, a farmer, living nearby. Lytle was a traveling salesman for a Portsmouth, Ohio, firm. His widow is postmistress at Augusta.

MARION.—James B. Bolander, candidate for county office on the Prohibition ticket, and prominent Sunday school worker, has been convicted of having punished cruelly Mrs. Jose Derrick, 74 years old, a former school teacher and a distant relative. His conviction carries a penalty of six months' imprisonment or a fine of $200, or both.

"Well?" said the counsel as the witness hesitated.

"He took it back to th' manager," concluded the witness.

Richmonites have always known it as the Richmond-Hamilton, or Richmond-Eaton pike, but Rand McNally gives it as the National road. We understand the National road turns north at the foot of Sycamore hill. Can you straighten this matter for us? — You are right in believing that the National road turns north at Sycamore hill. The pike is the Richmond-Eaton pike, but many people call it the National road.

If You Are Afflicted With GONORRHEA SYPHILIS

Or Any Other Venereal Diseases
You ought to go AT ONCE to some reputable physician for treatment, and KEEP ON GOING until he discharges you. Do not trust your own judgment in this respect because it is not reliable.

Or, go to the CLINIC conducted by representatives of the United States Public Health Service at EASTHAVEN on Monday and Friday nights from 7:00 to 9:00. You owe this to yourself, but if you do not think of yourself, think of the COMMUNITY in which you live. Its health is something to be considered. The COMMUNITY has made it possible for you to be physically clean at little or no cost to yourself, therefore the least you can do is to co-operate with the CLINIC officials at EASTHAVEN.

AND, after you have been cleansed, why not STAY clean?
