HISTORIC ORCHESTRA TO APPEAR APRIL 1

The New York Philharmonic orchestra, which plays at the Coliseum on April 1 under the direction of Woman's club, is the dean of our musical institutions.

The seventy-ninth year of uninterrupted civic and musical service is now before the Philharmonic. This season finds America's oldest symphonic institution with an unparalleled tradition of musical history making as its background, and eager in its purpose to fulfill for the future the avowed intention of the society's founders to produce "a number of concerts each year of a much higher order than have ever been given in the city." As James Gibbons Huneker, the distinguished critic has said, "The history of the Philharmonic orchestra is the history of music in America."

Bergmann First Conductor

Its first conductor of international fame was Carl Bergmann, who was a pioneer in introducing the music of Wagner to symphonic audiences in this country. Theodore Thomas, whom all Americans revere as the man who did more to spread the love of good music in this land than any other one person, was conductor of the Philharmonic for many years. After Theodore Thomas came Anton Seidl, for four years Wagner's private secretary.

At the time of Seidl's death he had been conductor of the Philharmonic for eight years. Among other famous conductors who have wielded the baton over this famous institution are Colonne, Wassily Safonoff, Henry Wood, Gustav Mahler, and now, of course, Josef Stravinsky.

The Philharmonic has gradually extended its activities until now the members of the orchestra devote practically all their time to the work of the organization. Rehearsals are held daily during the season, and about sixty concerts are given by the society in New York and Brooklyn, in addition to which tours including over twenty cities are made every year.

Several "Y" Men to Attend Meeting at State Capitol

Richmond Y will be represented at the annual state Y. M. C. A. convention to be held in Indianapolis March 17 and 18, according to General Secretary J. L. Smith of the local Y. Several delegates from the local Y will be chosen by the board of directors.

The convention will be held in the First Baptist church as it is more quiet, comfortable and otherwise favorable than any hotel auditorium in Indianapolis.

Bishop Leete, the new bishop of the Indianapolis diocese of M. E. churches will be one of the speakers at the annual dinner on the evening of March 17. Friday night a special section has been reserved in the tabernacle, for the delegates, where Gipsy Smith, the noted evangelist, is speaking.

President Beeson, Vice-President George L. Mackintosh of the Indiana Y executive committee and many other Indiana leaders will be present at the meeting according to word received here.

Arthur was considered the handsomest of all the presidents; Van Buren, trained and fitted as a man of fashion, was the most faultlessly dressed of the nation's executives.

PRISONER IN JAIL HANGS SELF IN CELL

Albert Eartell, 27 years old, 1316 N. F street, committed suicide by hanging himself at the county jail early Sunday morning. Blankets from his bed were torn in strips to provide a rope. He was found about 6 o'clock Sunday morning by Turnkey Morgan.

Eartell was to have been tried in circuit court Monday morning on a charge of criminal assault on a 10 year old girl.

Coroner Bond stated that the man had been dead about five hours when found. He had tied the rope around the top of the door to his cell and jumped from the bed, his feet hanging little more than a foot from the floor.

Eartell was arrested about two weeks ago by Sheriff Carl Wadman on a complaint filed by Mrs. Elizabeth Candler, probation officer.

Clark vs. Claude C. Clark, cruel and inhuman treatment is alleged.
