

ELLER AND MARQUARD PUZZLING TO TULSA; BOHNE LOOTS APPLE

TULSA, Okla., March 31.—Despite the chilly weather the Reds battled with the Tulsa club for eight innings, defeating them by the score of 14-3. The Ellers left the field at the end of the eighth inning, thinking the game was over which was satisfactory to the Reds and the somewhat 400 fans that turned out to see the game.

Eller and Marquard did the hurting for the Reds and both were rather puzzling to the Tulsa team, although Eller was rather easy to hit. He passed and hitting a batsman in the five rounds that he worked, but he was not touched up with any severity. All of Tulsa's runs were made off Eller in the first two innings and none of the passes figure in the runs. Marquard worked in the last three innings in fine style, did not allow a runner to get past and did not allow a hit.

Bohne Clout Apple. Bohne started the ball to rolling when in the first inning he drove out a vicious home run over the left field fence. He scored another in the second and did some good work until the fifth when he scored in every round from then on until the end of the game.

Wingo collected a homer, double and a single in five ups to the bat. While Crane and Cona smashed the ball with vigor. Bohndid some clever work around the corner that was noteworthy.

The Reds will travel to End Thursday where they will be the team from that city.

Aspirants of Clouting Greatness Should Whang 'em From Port Side

By Frank G. Menke

It would seem that the youth who aspires to clouting greatness in the majors should elect to whang 'em from the port side of the plate. For beyond Lajoie, Wagner and Deleahanty, all the truly great swatsmiths of modern times left the ball to ethereal heights with left handed swings.

The dynamic Babe Ruth is a left-handed hitter. So is the great George Sisler, the smacking champion of 1920. Ty Cobb, who went beyond 400 twice, and who was hit for a grand average of .370 since 1905 is a southpaw batter. And Tris Speaker is ditto. Roush, Wheat, Collins, Baker, Jackson, Veach—all of them hit from the left side.

In 20 years only one right-handed batter has concluded the year with a mark better than 400. That was in 1901 when Lajoie, then a member of the Athletics, as a result of his leap from the Phillies, hit .405. In the era since then, four marks better than 400 have been hung up—all of them by left handers. They are Cobb, .420, in 1911; Cobb, .410, in 1910; Jackson, .408, in 1911, and Sisler, .407, in 1920.

Left Handers Lead. Barring the year 1887, there have been 14 hitters beyond 400 in the modern game. Of that number 10 have hit from the left side of the plate while only four have been right handers. The year 1887 is not counted because bases on balls were scored as hits that season which resulted in a list of seventeen 400 hitters.

Skidding back to 1920, one finds a preponderance of left handers among the 300 whackers. Here are the figures:

American League	Total	Batters	300 or better
Left handed hitters	42	22	22
Right handed hitters	22	11	11
Batters hitting from both sides	3	3	3
National League	Total	Batters	300 or better
Left handed hitters	20	12	12
Right handed hitters	8	8	8
Summary Both Leagues	Total	Batters	300 or better
Left handed hitters	62	34	34
Right handed hitters	30	19	19
Turn over hitters	3	3	3

Those who dip deeply into statistics found a grand batting average, for all left handed hitters in the majors did the same thing with the right handers and discovered that left handers are hitting nearly 25 points beyond the right handers in these days.

Rogers Hornsby, who led the National parade to the October wire, is a right handed hitter—the first right handed champion the older league has had since Helme Zimmerman, cavorting then in a Cub uniform, won the championship of 1912 with .372. Sisler that time the leaders Jake Daubert (1912-1914), Larry Doyle (1915), Eddie Roush (1917-1919), and Zach Wheat (1918), have been southpaw hitters.

Hal Chase, champion of 1916, was a turn-over hitter, swinging right handed against southpaws and left handed against standard twirlers.

Dungan First King. Only two right handers have annexed championships in the American League. The first clouting king of the circuit was Sam Dungan, a left hander who operated in behalf of Kansas City in 1900, the inaugural year of the Johnson organization. Lajoie was champion in 1901, surrendered it to Ed Deleahanty, another right hander, in 1902. The Frenchman led again in 1903, 1904 and 1905; George Stone, a left hander was the boss in 1906—and then came Ty Cobb.

The "Southern Typhoon" was champion from 1907 to 1915 inclusive, lost out in 1916 to Speaker, came back as champion in 1917, 1918 and 1919—but lost his colors to Sisler in 1920.

Since the American League came to life in 1900, a total of 21 big league seasons have been played. That means two batting champions in the majors each year. Here are the interesting totals:

American League	Left handed champions	Right handed champions
Right handed champions	9	12
National League	Left handed champions	Right handed champions
Left handed champions	12	12
Right handed champions	12	12
Summary	Left handed champions	Right handed champions
Right handed champions	21	24

What's the answer? Nothing more nor less than that a man hitting from the left side of the plate has, even before the ball is pitched, a one jump advantage on the right handed hitter. He is, through position at the plate, one step nearer to first base. And when it is remembered that about 50 out of every 100 plays at first are decided by one step, the big edge which the left handers has is apparent.

"But," insists Arthur Irwin, veteran of the days of John Clarkson, Captain Anson, Bill Lange and the others, "no kid should choose to bat from the left side just because of that. The boy beginning the game, should try to be a left handed hitter. But if he finds he hasn't as much driving power, nor batting judgment, by swinging from the left side, he should shift to right handed batting and stick to it."

It was made in the seventh inning of Wednesday's game at Ranger, Texas, where the Detroit Tigers and the Columbus American association club, when Ty placed the ball to the left of the pitcher's box and flag scored.

Much of the Tiger's training in attack under their manager has been devoted to sacrificing, squeeze and other plays designed to produce a run in a pinch.

EAGLE BASEBALL TO AWAIT PARK LEASING

Plans for the organizing of the eagles base ball team for the coming season are rapidly under way, but it is not known whether the team will play in Richmond or be a road team. Manager Oscar Williams stated that has been unable to lease Exhibition field for the season. If he is unable to do this the team will be a road team.

It is possible that a league of teams from the different lodges of Indiana Eagles will be organized. Teams from many cities in Indiana have announced their intention of entering the league if it is organized. If this league is organized the Eagles will be according to the manager.
