

INDIANAPOLIS HANGS OUT WELCOME FOR MASONIC SWORDSMEN

Indianapolis is preparing to stage a hearty welcome for visitors to the city for the 47th annual convocation of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar, of Indiana, meeting in Indianapolis May 11 and 12, according to advices from that city. Reports received at the office of Grand Recorder William H. Swintz show that every Knights Templar commandery in Indiana will be represented, a large number with their bands and drill corps.

Over 100 Richmond Knights Templar are expected to attend the convocation.

This year's convocation will, indications show, be the greatest in the history of Indiana Templar Masonry and it is the desire of Raper Commandery No. 1, together with the Scottish Rite and the Shrine, as hosts, to make it greater and grander than ever. With reduced railroad and interstate fares for the occasion, not less than 5,000 persons will be present. No less than 2,000 swords are looked for in the grand parade on the first day's meeting. Louis G. Remmelsbaum, the best hand squire in Indiana, heads the reception committee; Leonidas P. Newby, who believes that more smiles mean more miles on the bright highway of life and is the expert gloom "buster" of the triennial convocation, has a staff of his kind on the committee to meet and care for the distinguished visitors.

Entertainment provided for. Paul B. Elliott and his committee will supply entertainment and fill in wherever opportunity offers. For this purpose two orchestras of string instruments and Murat's saxophone sextette, and several moving pictures from the Pathe company have been contracted for.

A condensed program for Wednesday, May 11, is being worked out. Each member, visitor and the ladies will be provided with one of these on their arrival in Indianapolis. The ladies will register with the ladies' committee in the lobby of the Claypool hotel, immediately on arrival in Indianapolis and receive tickets for the various functions in their honor. Ladies must have tickets, and the Knights must be in uniform to be admitted to the luncheons and special entertainments.

Policemen of Uniontown, Pa., are forbidden to wear moustache or whiskers.
