

MANY PREPARE FOR RUSH TO OIL FIELD IN MACKENZIE BASIN

(By Associated Press.)
EDMONTON, Alberta, June 9.—Fortune seekers from all parts of Canada and various parts of the United States are gathering for the dash into the far north oil and mineral fields when navigation opens about the middle of June.

Edmonton, Fort McMurray and Peace River Crossing, the latter two gateways into the Mackenzie river basin oil fields, are showing signs of activity, with large fleets of river steamers and gasoline boats getting ready for the short summer transportation season.

Edmonton railroad yards are jammed with freight for north points, and both Fort McMurray and Peace River Crossing are experiencing unprecedented prosperity and bustle, all coming from the first wave of the oil boom.

Population Doubles.
The little town of Fort McMurray has already doubled its population since last fall and with the opening of navigation it is expected to reach four times its previous size. Many new buildings are being erected, while along the banks of the river, boats, scows and lumber craft are being constructed.

Peace River Crossing also is garnering its share of the rush. This town is the temporary headquarters of the government parties going into the north country this year, in addition to oil prospectors. Ten government parties are getting ready at Peace River or have already taken the field from this point, including four topographical, three geographical and one astronomical survey parties. Another government party will make an exhaustive report of the possibilities of the new oil fields.

River men say they will be able to handle all freight offered for northern points, recent heavy rains having filled northern streams and solved the problem of low water which threatened to tie up navigation to the Mackenzie fields.

Traffic Is Growing.
In the meantime the activity at Fort McMurray and Peace River Crossing is growing in intensity daily. Every train to the north is crowded and travelers from both points say that accommodations are at a premium. One party leaving here for Fort McMurray took along their own bedding and shelter tents, reports being that they would be unable to obtain them on arrival. River craft are taking the water daily at both these points.

That dominion authorities anticipate some difficulty with parties of "cheekies" or newcomers, in the country is evident from the stringent regulations governing entry into the new lands.

Police Pats on Applicants.
A all police points manned by the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, oil seekers and others are compelled to show their entry permits. These permits are not issued unless the applicants satisfy the police patrols, composed of hardened "mushers" and "sour-doughs" that they are physically capable of enduring hardships, are properly equipped for the long journey, and are assured of being able to return to civilization at the end of the season's work. Failing in this, they must show that they have a grub stake sufficient for a full 12 months or that they have the necessary orders on the trading posts already established to carry them through for a year's supply of food.

Thus far few applying for permits have been refused by police officials. Later on, when the real rush begins, police officials say, considerable weeding out will have to be done.

The 16-mile portage between Fort Fitzgerald and Fort Smith is expected to show considerable congestion when the rush starts, old timers say, notwithstanding the presence of 50 teams and several powerful tractors which have been sent to this strip of land to cope with the influx.

The two natural routes leading to the Fort Norman fields are via Peace River Crossing and Fort McMurray. There are two other routes, however, which would lead the travelers in the new fields from six weeks to two months earlier than by either the Peace or McMurray lines, but both these routes call for long portages and considerable outfit.

Egypt possesses the largest tomb in the world—the pyramid of Cheops, which covers thirteen acres and is 461 feet high.

PART FOUR

It was already dark when we reached the old University City. Holmes took a cab at the station, and ordered the man to drive to the house of Dr. Leslie Armstrong. A few minutes later we had stopped at a large mansion in the busiest thoroughfare. We were shown in, and after a long wait were at last admitted into the consulting room, where we found the doctor seated behind his table.

"It argues the degree in which I had lost touch with my profession that the name of Leslie Armstrong was not known to me. Now I am aware that he is not only one of the heads of the medical school of the University, but a thinker of European reputation in more than one branch of science. Yet even without knowing his brilliant record one could not fail to be impressed by a mere glance at the man, the square, massive face, the brooding eyes under the thatched brows, and the granite moulding of the inflexible jaw. A man of deep character, a man with an alert mind, grim, ascetic self-contained, formidable—so I had learned of Leslie Armstrong. He held my friend's card in his hand, and he looked up with no very pleased expression upon his dour features.

"I have heard your name, Mr. Sherlock Holmes, and I am aware of your profession—one of which I by no means approve.

"In the doctor, you will find yourself in agreement with every criminal in the country," said my friend, quietly.

"So far as your efforts are directed toward the suppression of crime, sir, they must have the support of every reasonable member of the community, though I cannot doubt that the official machinery is amply sufficient for the purpose. Where your calling is more open to criticism is when you pry into the secrets of private individuals, when you rake up family matters which are better hidden, and when you incidentally waste the time of men who are more busy than yourself. At the present moment, for example, I should be writing a treatise instead of conversing with you."

"No doubt, Doctor; and yet the conversation may prove more important than the treatise. Incidentally, I may tell you that we are doing the reverse of what you very justly blame, and that we are endeavoring to prevent anything like public exposure of private matters which must necessarily follow when once the case is fairly in the hands of the official police. You may look upon me simply as an irregular pioneer, who goes in front of the regular forces of the country. I have come to ask you about Mr. Godfrey Staunton."

"What about him?"

"You know him, do you not?"

"He is an intimate friend of mine."

"You are aware that he has disappeared?"

"Ah, indeed!" There was no change of expression in the rugged features of the doctor.

"He left his hotel last night—he has not been heard of."

"Do not doubt he will return."

"Tomorrow is the Varsity football match."

"I have no sympathy with these childish games. The young man's fate interests me deeply, since I know him and like him. The football match does not come within my horizon at all."

"I claim your sympathy, then, in my investigation of Mr. Staunton's fate. Do you know where he is?"

"Certainly not."

"You have not seen him since yesterday?"

"No, I have not."

"Was Mr. Staunton a healthy man?"

"Absolutely."

"Did you ever know him ill?"

"Never."

Holmes popped a sheet of paper before the doctor's eyes. "Then perhaps you will explain this receipted bill for thirteen guineas, paid by Mr. Godfrey Staunton last month, to Dr. Leslie Armstrong, of Cambridge, which I picked it out from among the papers upon his desk."

GETTING ALONG GOOD
Women are as great sufferers from kidney and bladder ailments as men. Foley Kidney Pills help rid the blood stream of impurities that cause rheumatic pains, backache, swollen, aching joints and stiff, painful muscles. Mrs. Inez, Box 11, E. D. No. 2, Middle town, N. Y., writes: "I have kidney trouble ever since I was a little girl, but I am getting along good since I have taken Foley Kidney Pills. They act immediately and help restore the kidneys to healthful activity." A. G. Luken and Co., 426-523 Main St.—Advertisement.

The doctors flushed with anger.

"I do not feel that there is any reason why I should render an explanation to you, Mr. Holmes."

Holmes replaced the bill in his notebook. "If you prefer a public explanation, it must come sooner or later," said he. "I have already told you that I can hush up that which others will be bound to publish, and you would really be bound to take me into your complete confidence."

"I know nothing about it."

"Did you hear from Mr. Staunton in London?"

"Certainly not."

"Dear me, dear me—the post-office again!" Holmes sighed, wearily. "A most urgent telegram was dispatched to you from London by Godfrey Staunton at six-fifteen yesterday evening—a telegram which is undoubtedly associated with his disappearance—and yet you have not had it. It is most culpable of me that I shall certainly go down to the office here and register a complaint."

Dr. Leslie Armstrong sprang up from behind his desk, and his dark face was crimson with fury.

"Will trouble you to walk out of my house, sir," said he. "You can tell your employer, Lord Mount-James, that I do not wish to have anything to do either with him or with his agents. No, sir—not another word!" He rang the bell furiously. "John, show these gentlemen out." A pompous butler ushered us severely to the door, and we found ourselves in the street. Holmes burst out laughing.

"Dr. Leslie Armstrong is certainly a man of energy and character," said he. "I have not seen a man who, if he turns his talents that way, was more calculated to fill the gap left by the illustrious Moriarty. And now, my poor Watson, here we are, stranded and friendless in this inhospitable town, which we cannot leave without abandoning our case. This little inn just opposite Armstrong's house, if you would engage a front room and purchase the necessities for the night, I may have time to make a few inquiries."
