

NEW INTEREST SHOWN IN EDUCATION PROVES FACTOR IN PROGRESS

(By Associated Press)
DES MOINES, Ia., July 2.—Pre-eminent among the many factors that should be mentioned in the educational progress of the year is the aroused interest in education itself, Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews, of Boston, told the National Education Association here today.

"We might almost speak of an educational renaissance," Mrs. Andrews said.

"Educational leaders have become leaders in educational progress; they have forced the public to recognize the importance of education in a new and different light; they have established the belief that education has social, economic and political value—that the stability of the country rests on education," Mrs. Andrews added. "In the midst of economic depression and world upheaval, they have demanded more money for the schools, and they have convinced the public that the greatest financial asset of a country, regardless of the moral asset, is an educated people."

Ignorance Expensive
A review of the educational legislation during the past year is a striking evidence of this belief. The country cannot afford not to spend money for the adequate education of all its children.

"The determination to give every boy and girl a chance, to see that the eleven million rural school children have opportunities commensurate with the urban children, is a leading part of the program in this educational revival, and it is the educators who are forcing this problem on the people, and demanding the necessary funds for the realization of their plans. They have made their own program, which covers every phase of the educational problem, from the kindergarten through the university, and they are determined to carry it through. Where is a virility in the educational world today that was hardly conceivable five years ago?"

War Taught Lesson

"Our school men and women have learned the lesson of the war. New projects and new methods voice the needs of the new time. New courses in history are about to be published. Schools are vying with each other for the best citizenship courses. There has never been such a serious consideration of the meaning of citizenship, and our school people are taking the lead in formulating the definition. They are using education to help solve the problems of the nation, as the various committees of the National Council indicate—witness the committee on thrift education, the committee on racial well-being, the committee of character and citizenship education, and the committee on democracy applied to education."

"The last committee is enlisting the co-operation of every national organization which is aiming to promote a better American citizenship and a truer democracy. To no part of our national life can we look with greater satisfaction or with greater hope than to our education and to the men and women who are devotedly applying themselves to its progress."

SHOWS NEXT WEEK TO BRING OWN BAND

One of the main features to be found with the World at Home and Pollack Brothers' Combined Shows, to show here next week under the auspices of the local American Legion, is the all-American military and concert band under the personal direction of Prof. Con Jespersen. This band will give daily concerts during the engagement in Richmond.

Among other features carried are Omar Sami and his temple of modern miracles, featuring Zerlina, the girl with million eyes, and Maxine, the half lady; Midget City, with Mike and Ike, twin boxing midgets; Wiederman circus sideshow, with circus novelties; Arabian Nights, with its beautiful dancing nymphs; Doc Lamar's Chinese underworld; Laugh Land; Joe Perrelli and athletes; Vampires; Springtime and Curtis animal circus. The latest rides include the carouselle, whip, ferris wheel, aerial boats, flying planes, tantalizer and Joe Dobish riding demons.

The amusement committee of the American Legion promises the local public some novelties of the most startling nature in the amusement line during the showing of these attractions this coming week. Matinees will be given each afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the evening entertainment will start promptly at 7:30 o'clock. The show grounds will be located at Athletic Park and can be reached by taking the Earlham cars.

PART SIX.

"I must really apologize, Hopkins," said Sherlock Holmes. "I fear that the scrambled eggs are cold. However, you will enjoy the rest of your breakfast all the better, will you not, for the thought that you have brought your case to a triumphant conclusion."

Stanley Hopkins was speechless with amazement.

"I don't know what to say, Mr. Holmes," he blurted out at last, with a very red face. "It seems to me that I have been making a fool of myself from the beginning. I understand now, what I should never have forgotten, that I am the pupil and you are the master. Even now I see what you have done, but I don't know how you did it, or what it signifies."

"Well, well," said Holmes, good humoredly. "We all learn by experience and your lesson this time is that you should never lose sight of the alternative. You were so absorbed in young Nelligan that you could not spare a thought to Patrick Cairns, the true murderer of Peter Carey."

The hoarse voice of the seaman broke in on our conversation.

"See here, mister," said he, "I make no complaint of being manhandled in this fashion, but I would have you call things by their right names. You say I killed Peter Carey, and there's all the difference. Maybe you don't believe what I say. Maybe you think I am just slinging you a yarn."

"Not at all," said Holmes. "Let us hear what you have to say."

"It's soon told, and, by the Lord, every word of it is truth. I knew Black Peter, and when he pulled out his knife I whipped a harpoon through him sharp, for I knew that it was him or me. That's how he died. You can call it murder. Anyhow, I'd as soon die with a rope round my neck as with Black Peter's knife in my heart."

"How came you there?" asked Holmes.

"I'll tell it to you from the beginning. Just sit me up a little, so as I can speak easy. It was in '83 that it happened—August of that year. Peter Carey was master of the Sea Unicorn, and I was spare harpooner. We were coming out of the ice-pack on our way home, with head winds and a week's southerly gale, when we picked up a little craft that had blown north. There was one man on her—a landsman. The crew had thought she would founder, and had made for the Norwegian coast in the dinghy. I guess they were all drowned. Well we took him on board, this man, and he and the skipper had some long talks in the cabin. All the baggage we took off with him was one tin box. So far as I know, the man's name was never mentioned, and on the second night he disappeared as if he had never been. It was given out that he had either thrown himself overboard or fallen overboard in the heavy weather that we were having. Only one man knew what had happened to him, and that was me, for, with my own eyes, I saw the skipper tip up his heels and put him over the rail in the middle watch of a dark night, two days before we sighted the Sheetland Lights.

"Well, I kept my knowledge to myself, and waited to see what would come of it. When we got to Scotland it was easily hushed up, and nobody asked any questions. A stranger died by accident, and it was nobody's business to inquire. Shortly after Peter Carey gave up the sea, and it was long years before I could find where he was. I guessed that he had done the deed for the sake of what was in that tin box, and that he could afford now to pay me well for keeping my mouth shut."

"I found out where he was through a sailor man that had met him in London, and down I went to squeeze him. The first night he was reasonable enough, and was ready to give me what would make me free of the sea for life. We were to fix it all two nights later. When I came, I found him three parts drunk and in a vile temper. We sat down and we drank and we yawned about old times, but the more he drank the less I liked the look on his face. I spotted that harpoon upon the wall, and I thought:

Maj. M. J. Connally burning modi-fied TNT.

Maj. M. J. Connally, former explosives officer in the U. S. army, has saved the government $10,000,000 by securing reversal of the order to destroy war explosives. These munitions, TNT and picric acid, are now being used in road building and for distribution among the farmers. If it were dynamite instead of the modified TNT the major were burning both he and the cameraman would be among the missing.

STOP SILLY RUMORS ABOUT WAR WITH U. S., SAYS JAPANESE PAPER

(By Associated Press)
TOKIO, July 2—"It is absurd to talk about war between Japan and the United States," says the Yomiuri Shimbun, "but the silly rumors unless stopped at their sources may one day become a reality. It therefore behoves both Japan and America to do their best so that all possibilities of war may be prevented. There are two ways to reach this objective. One is the limitation of armaments and the other is a diplomatic understanding. So long as the relations between Japan and America remain strained as at present, a satisfactory restoration of friendship between Japan and China, and a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance cannot be expected. People talk about the curtailment of warship building by Japan and the United States as a means of averting the possible clash
