

MASTERLY PITCHING AND STERLING SUPPORT TOO MUCH FOR REDS

CHICAGO, July 6.—Cheever pitched a masterly game in front of the sterling support given him by his teammates, enabling the Cubs to emerge victorious by a score of 3 to 2 over the Reds in the get-away scrap of the series.

The Reds bunched three of their hits in the fourth inning, beginning with a home run over the right field wall by Eddie Roush. That really tied a knot in the score but the Cubs again climbed out in front in the fifth and Cheever never wavered after that.

Timely stick work by Deal and Plack were factors in the victory, the latter's third successive single being good for the winning tally, while Deal's three cushion shot counted two runs with the aid of a wild throw in the second.

TIMELY HITTING AIDS KIWANIS VICTORY

Timely hitting aided by several errors at critical times, enabled the Kiwanis club to defeat the Postoffice in a Commercial league contest at Exhibition park Tuesday afternoon by the score of 12 to 3.

Mowe started the game for the Kiwanis on the hill, and was invincible, the losers being unable to connect safely with his offerings.

In the fifth round, with a comfortable lead, the Kiwanians changed hurlers, Stokes taking up the mound duty and Mowe shifted to second base. Stokes was not as effective, but good support pulled him through several times.

Mowe was the heavy man with the stick, getting four hits out of four times to bat, while Stinson, of the losers, connected for two safeties out of as many times at bat.

Wednesday afternoon the Mather Meats and the Bankers will play at Exhibition park.

SEVEN MAJOR TEAMS GET THIRTEEN HITS

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 6.—Thirteen hits for a team total occurred seven times in major league games yesterday, and in four cases the team making the baker's dozen was victorious. All of the St. Louis National League players aided in hitting out 13 hits to defeat the Pittsburgh leaders.

The Washington Americans performed the stunt twice in winning over Boston, which had that number of hits in one of the contests. The Cleveland world's champions and the Chicago White Sox each hit the ball safely 13 times, but the Indians scored four times as many runs as the Sox.

The Philadelphia Athletics made 13 hits, but lost to New York despite the visitor's four-run lead obtained in the first inning. The remarkable total of 21 assists, for eight innings, was made by the Cincinnati Nationals. Second Base man Bohne and Shortstop Bohne accepted 20 out of 21 chances.

Pitcher Myers, of the Boston Americans, earned his salary in the second Boston-Washington contest. The Red Sox twirler made half of his team's six hits and had eight assists in the field.

Lively Ball is Hurting Game, Says Hank O'Day
NEW YORK, July 6.—Hank O'Day, National League umpire, thinks the ball is too lively, is hurting the game and making "buckers" out of infielders.

"It's a better ball than ever," he said today. "There is no question about that. It's wound tighter and the cover is stretched so that it's tight as a drum. But it's too lively and is hurting the game."

"The ball goes so fast that spectacular stops and fine plays in the field are getting to be things of the past. Outfielders play back so far that you seldom see anybody put out at the plate by one thrown from the outfield."

Great Baseball Players Differ on Value of Bunting to Batters

Some Noble Athletes Think Practice is Last Resort of Those Who Find it Impossible to Wallop 'em—Others Acclaim it Scientific Play

By FRANK G. MENKE
What is the ranking of a bunt in baseball?
Some of the noble athletes think that bunting is a last resort of those who found it impossible to hit over the hills and far away; others acclaim it the most difficult and the most scientific part of offensive baseball play.

So there you are!
One finds that Babe Ruth, mightiest bludgeoner of any era, never bunts. And, at the same time, one discovers that a bunting attack mixed up with straight-away drives made by Cobb the most remarkable batter of all time.

Once upon a time Zach Wheat, slugger of the Dodgers, parked in the dug-out, watched one of his mates make an unsuccessful attempt to bunt safely.

Don't Like Bunting
"There's a part of the game I don't like," remarked Wheat, referring to the bunt. "Can't see any sense in it. Can't see where a fellow should get up there and hit the ball so that may be he'll get one base on the hit—and maybe none at all—while he passes up the chance to hammer the ball out of the lot."

"How many times have you bunted the ball in the last five years?" asked Hy Myers, a teammate.
"Twice,"
"That's about right," mused Myers. "And yet, if you had bunted about 200 times your batting average would have been at least 25 points fatter each year."

"How so?" quizzed Wheat.
Mixes Up Attack
"Because by bunting you'd be mixing up your attack—and that's the thing that confuses the other players," was the answer. "As matters stand now, every opposition player knows when you come to the plate you are not going to bunt—that you're going to wallop it. So they play back and because they play back rather far you have a tough time butting the ball past them."

"But," added Myers, "if you did some bunting occasionally those birds wouldn't know how to play you. They'd be worried. They wouldn't be playing out very far and, therefore, if you decided to paste a fast one through the infield, the chances are it would get past them for a hit before they could hop over and head it off."

Was Myers right?
Willie Keeler, most scientific batsman in baseball's history, was a bunter par excellence. He amassed an amazing batting average because he, unlike Wheat, mixed 'em up. If the infield was out fairly far, he'd drop a bunt. If it played in close he'd aim to shoot it just beyond the diamond for a Texas Leaguer. He established his hitting reputation because he was forever "crossing" the enemy.

Cobb Modern Keeler.
Cobb is the modern Keeler. Whenever he steps to the plate no man can forecast his plans. He may drop the ball in front of the plate; he may try to slash it on a whistling bouncer through the pitcher's box; he may aim it for just back of the infield. Or he may try to place it out in the park.

"Bunting ability is largely responsible for whatever success I have had as a hitter," declares Cobb. "If there was no such a play as the bunt hit, the business of making safeties would be a whole lot harder than it is now. But there is such a thing as a bunt—and by use of it I can 'cross' the opposition very often and fatten my batting average."

Reason For Babe.
Ruth doesn't bunt—but there's a weighty reason. If he attempted one the chances are that he'd be beaten to first by twenty feet with the throw. But why should Ruth bunt and reap almost sure death, when, by slashing at the ball, he is quite likely to whang against the floor of Heaven?

Wheat doesn't bunt because he thinks it foolish for a man to try to get a one base hit when he is just as likely to get a two or three baser.

Who is right—the Wheaties or the men like Cobb and Keeler?

Chips and Slips

Babe Ruth hit his 31st home run of the season off Hasty, of Philadelphia, in the sixth inning of Tuesday's game.

The New York Yankees won their eighth successive game and took the complete series from the Athletics.

Cleveland had a field day with Chicago Tuesday, winning the last game of the series 16 to 4. Chicago garnered 13 hits off Sothoron but were unable to make them turn into runs.

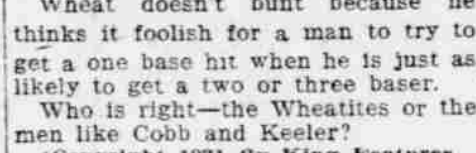

The Memphis club of the Southern Association set a new minor league run record when it scored 29 runs on 30 hits in Tuesday's game against Little Rock. The former record was 24 held by Atlanta made last season against Birmingham.

Urban Fabers set a style which other pitchers might follow. In two games this season, the veteran right-hander has faced Babe Ruth without flinching and held him hitless. In Chicago on the last trip Faber pitched to Babe five times and prevented him from doing a thing. On the Polo grounds Urban gave one pass because he could not cut the corners as fine as he wanted to, but in three trials Babe did not get the leather out of

Zealous Fans Prevents Babe Getting Two Homers Tuesday
(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 6.—Babe Ruth would have been credited with two home runs, instead of one in the box scores published today had not an enthusiastic fan tried to catch the ball yesterday. Ruth's high drive mingled with the clouds and was descending just on the edge of the right field stands when the fan jumped up and diverted the ball into the field instead of clapping it in his hands. Ruth was on third base but Umpire Connolly sent him back to second under the ground rules.
Ruth has 31 homers to his credit with New York yet to play three games before reaching the half way mark of the season. At this rate the Yankee slugger would hit at least 64 home runs, ten more than last year.

GOING UP!

Oh, the ball sings a tune, A melodious croon, For the batter who wallops the pill. But it draws, as it sails, Some real heart-rending wails From the pitcher who stands on the hill.

Oh, bring back the days Of the few-hit games, And hurling duels of yore—When play used to start At the hour of three And end shortly after four.
