The musical program which is to be carried out in the public schools this winter was outlined briefly Monday by J. E. Maddy, supervisor of music in the public schools and conductor of the Richmond Symphony orchestra.

The program includes organization of numerous choruses, orchestras and glee clubs in the different schools and the introduction of several new courses.

A new institution in the high school is the offering of credit for orchestra work. Players of instruments will be eligible to this course, which will give credit of five hours a week. For those not wishing to take the five-hour orchestra course, an after-school orchestra will also be organized. The orchestra will give at least one public concert this year.

The Apollo chorus of 60 voices will begin rehearsals in two weeks. Credit is given in this course. Only the openings left by former members of the Apollo chorus will be filled. Several of the school will be filled. About 45 of the 60 persons comprising the chorus last year will be in it this year, it is said.

Meet Once Each Week
The general chorus, comprised of the Apollo chorus and all other students wishing to join, will meet once a week. The work of this chorus is in the nature of a community sing.

Three and possibly four choruses classes are to be held during the week. The purpose of these classes is to give vocal training to the students and instruction in reading and singing.

The band chorus, which will open next year, may have the addition of members this year. Supervisor Maddy said. The band had 25 members last year. This year there is enough money on hand to buy three new uniforms, which will make it possible to enlarge the organization a little.

Players Are Wanted
Players are wanted for several instruments which the school owns, it is said. These are partly for the band and partly for the orchestra. Several of the instruments students may play without taking lessons, the necessary instruction being given by Mr. Maddy. The instruments include one trombone, two cellos, three bass violins, two bassoons and one oboe.

Classes in theory, history and harmony also will be given. All the classes in the high school will be under the direction of Mr. Maddy and Miss Juliet Nussbaum, assistant supervisor of music in the public schools.

A class in wind instruments, open to students from all the schools, which will be held at the high school, is being considered for this winter. Mr. Maddy has been conducting a similar class at Chautauqua, N. Y., at summer courses, during the last two summers.

Junior Orchestra
Garfield Junior high school is to have one orchestra this year. It will be under the conductorship of Miss Lela Longman. Miss Longman also will have charge of all chorus work in Garfield and the ninth grade chorus work in the high school. The girls' glee club at Garfield will be under her supervision, and the boys' glee club will be directed by E. E. Rice.

Piano classes under the supervision of several piano teachers, and violin classes taught by Frederick K. Hicks, will be continued in the grade schools this winter, Mr. Maddy said. Each grade school is to have its grade school orchestra, and it is planned that the combined grade school orchestras will give one public concert a semester.

Chorus classes are to be had by each room under the supervision of the teacher. A contest between the choruses of each grade in the different elementary schools is planned as one of the features of the elementary schools this year.

Children of all schools also will be participants in the May festival next spring.

Incorporation Question
Up at Economy Election
Vote on the petition for the incorporation or Economy will be held Monday, Sept. 19. The date for the election was set by the county commissioners Tuesday morning, and orders that notices of the election be posted immediately were given.

The polls will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the evening, according to the orders. A petition for an election was filed with the commissioners Monday.

Local Talent Plays Prominent Part in Chautauqua Program
Viewed in retrospect, several of the most charming musical features of the 1921 chautauqua were products of local talent.

Programs by the Richmond City band and the American Legion band, given on two evenings of the two weeks of sessions, were as enjoyable as the attractions brought to the city.

Dr. Russell H. Bready, platform manager, in his closing talk, declared that the chautauqua had been inaugurated upon having two such splendid bands. The American Legion band gave its concert on the first Saturday evening of the assembly.

The veterans were handicapped by the fact that they did not appear on the stage and their music was not heard in the chautauqua tent. Scores heard them play in the grove, however, and their concert was much appreciated.

City Concert Appreciated
The city band gave its concert prior to the concert by the Hadley Concert company Sunday night. Warm applause greeted each number. Several of the most difficult selections were rendered by the local musicians in polished form.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Foss were other local musicians whose efforts were greatly appreciated. While Mr. and Mrs. Smith have not entirely made their home in this city, they are welcomed as local products because of Mr. Smith's connections locally. Their program was presented the last Friday night of the session.

Children Do Good Work
Mrs. Frank Tillson is to be complimented upon her work with the children of the chautauqua. Through her efforts about 70 children presented a varied program on the last Saturday afternoon. Musical numbers and interpretive dances by the children were executed with an aptness indicative of careful training.

Chautauqua officers and directors who worked so earnestly for weeks before the assembly opened in order to insure the best for its patrons, are worthy of commendation for their public spirit.

Eight Months
Indiana district are keenly interested in the pending revenue measure.

The history of tariff legislation in congress since the days of the Mills bill show that nine months has been the maximum period for the preparation, enactment and putting into operation of a tariff bill. The average has been about five months.

To Rewrite Both
With two difficult measures before it the finance committee of the senate has decided to rewrite both of them. It is also the opinion of that committee that the tariff bill, the best served by acting first upon the revenue bill although the house passed the tariff bill before it took up the revenue measure. The committee expects to have the revenue bill ready for submission to the senate when congress reconvenes Sept. 21.

The finance committee by approving the American valuation plan provided in the house tariff bill came to the conclusion that sufficient information was not at hand upon which to determine proper and adequate rates of duty on that basis.

The finance committee was of the opinion that if tariff legislation was to be so radically changed in respect to valuation basis, in order to protect American industries in existing economic conditions throughout the world, American valuations should be definitely known and not left to mere conjecture.

Gathering Data
Treasury agents are now gathering this data and will be engaged in that work for six weeks or two months, the treasury department reports. When this information is compiled the rates of duty can be determined intelligently.

Republican members of the senate finance committee are confident that there will be no general protest over the decision to give the revenue bill the right of way in the senate over the tariff measure. The committee, it is said, has been swamped with appeals from business men, from coast to coast, to provide for tax revision above everything else. The plan to sidetrack the tariff bill by the senate finance committee, in the house the revenue bill, it might be mentioned, was first sponsored by Senator Watson of Indiana. The adoption of his proposal was forecast by the Palladium Bureau several weeks ago.

It is said that after the revenue bill is returned to the house it will scarcely be recognized by that body as it will be entirely rewritten by the senate finance committee. In the house the revenue bill was framed as a series of amendments to existing law. Chairman Penrose of the finance committee says his committee will report a bill that will contain all tax laws in one measure, amending where no change is made.

Prayer meetings will be resumed at Reid Memorial church Thursday evening. It is announced by the Rev. McClean Work. The prayer meeting will be followed by a meeting of the session and trustees of the church.

INDIANA INVITES VETS AND SCHOOL CHILDREN TO GREATEST FAIR
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 6.—Indiana today has invited veterans of all wars and school children to be her special guests at the greatest of all Hoosier state fairs, which opened yesterday in a triumphant blaze of glory, concluding at night with the Coliseum show and elaborate fireworks display. The second day will see many more of the exhibits in place and the state fair management expects the "show window of Hoosierdom" to strike a pace unsurpassed in past state fair histories.

Though the curtain was raised on what probably is the greatest fair in Indiana's history, the attendance for opening day was 13,812 less than for the first day last year.

26,559 Paid Admissions.
The figures show 26,559 paid admissions, as against 40,381 last year, according to William Jones, treasurer of the board. Threatening weather is said to have been largely responsible for the decrease in attendance.

With favorable weather the remainder of the week, state fair officials predict that the attendance record last year, which amounted to 182,015 paid admissions, will be equaled, if not surpassed. Mr. Jones declared that more than 10,000 persons entered the grounds yesterday morning before 10 o'clock. Most of them were out-of-town visitors who came in automobiles.

The new Agricultural and Horticultural building, at the northwest section of the grounds, just west of the Purdue university building, a magnificent, spacious building, in which the products of Hoosier grain fields and orchards are to be exhibited, was the scene of greatest activity yesterday afternoon, when delayed shipments of exhibits were being rushed. Horticulturists were busy preparing exhibits of fruits, garden produce, grains, etc.

Increased Exhibits Shown.
The increased number of exhibits of swine compelled the fair management to erect 500 overflow pens under tents. Extra stalls for about 700 cattle and

Boy is Well Now
"My son, twelve, became sick with St. Vitus dance. He could not eat or dress himself. He was under care of physicians for six weeks, without improvement. I was advised to try chiropractic. In four weeks the boy was able to play again. Now he is back in school and doing well."—Anna Koudela, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 1279.
