He told of conditions in the Near East which includes Palestine and Syria, Asia Minor, Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan and South East Russia. Armenia is particularly in need of help. Dr. Parkhill said, stating that they had suffered 90 percent loss of man power in the war, being overrun by opposing armies of the Central powers several times, while France had only a seven to eight percent loss.

"Armenia is a nation of orphans," said the speaker, "and the whole people will die unless we feed them."

Indiana is asked for 200 carloads of corn, or money to buy that amount. Wayne county's quota being three cars. Dr. Parkhill pointed out that two important economic factors would be served by the donations, as part of the $5,000,000 bushel surplus could be disposed of, helping to steady the market in this country, while at the same time a new market would be opened in the east. Already, he stated, orders are coming in for corn from eastern markets which have been accustomed to the use of corn for food through the work of relief committees.

To Consider Contributions.
Chairman Stewart announced that the matter of contributing corn would be taken up at the next Jefferson

PRINCESS BIBESCO STARTLES CAPITAL

Princess Bibesco.

"I Have Only Myself to Blame," is the title of a book just written by Princess Bibesco, who, before her marriage, was Elizabeth, daughter of Herbert Asquith, former British premier. She is now living in Washington as the wife of the Rumanian minister to the U. S., and her book, because of its extreme frankness, is said to have shocked the diplomatic circles in which she moves.

township farmers' meeting, and President Hunt advised all townships to bring the matter before their respective local organizations.

The subject of Mr. Pittenger's address was "The Anvil Chorus," mentioning some of the stock objections to farmers' organizations, he proceeded to refute them. "Farmers can't stick," and "The federation hasn't done anything," were the usual arguments, he said.

"Farmers have been stuck, now they are learning to stick," he said. "Our co-operatives prove that we can do our own business."

"Handling costs dropped from 80 percent to eight percent of the final cost in Denmark after the organization of co-operatives—a drop on the original producers' price from 400 percent to eight and a half percent," said the speaker. "Denmark was bankrupt 50 years ago, with her farmers getting only 18 to 20 cents of the consumer's dollar. They organized co-operatives and now the farmer receives 92 cents of the consumer's dollar. Here in the United States the producer gets 38 cents of the final dollar."

Handle Big Business
Other co-operatives in the country number 17,000 of which 5,000 are grain elevators, which handle a billion dollars worth of business last year. "The California Fruit Exchange has been in existence for 17 years and 75 per cent of all fruit sent out of California is handled through co-operatives."

The speaker mentioned the support of the St. Lawrence waterway project, the passage of legislation by the agricultural bloc, and in the state the work of the legislative committee, wool pools and other federation activities as accomplishments of the organization.

"We must give our hearty support to the farm bureau," he said, "and must not believe that it will succeed without our memberships. The opposition will fight us to a finish—their finish—and they have the money to make a long fight. During the fall when our state agent was trying to get fertilizer, he closed a contract at $20 a ton only two days before a rep-representative of one of the largest fertilizer companies offered the same factory $22 a ton to keep the fertilizer off the Indiana market."

Mr. Pittenger's address was followed by a "pep speech" by President Hunt, who advised the townships as to methods to be followed in putting on membership campaigns before Dec. 20, and exhorted them to comply with Mr. Pittenger's advice to "labor with the benighted souls until they come to the altar."

TRANSFER

inasmuch as all that work would have to be referred to the central office eventually.

Practically all of the state of Indiana is located in the veteran's bureau seventh district, the regional office being located in Cincinnati. The regional offices of the other districts are located at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Denver, San Francisco and Seattle. In addition to these regional offices, which handle all the claims and medical cases for districts of which they are headquarters, 140 sub-offices are being located, three in Indiana, at Evansville, Indianapolis, and Fort Wayne. These sub-offices are under the jurisdiction of and report to the regional offices of their districts.

America's two sacred and priceless documents, the declaration of independence and the constitution of the United States, now repose in a place safe from theft and fire risk, the library of congress. The transfer of these documents from the state department to the library was made recently by an order issued by President Harding.

A fire risk existed at the state department, and, moreover, there was no satisfactory room where the two documents could be exhibited. Thousands of Americans annually seek to view the faded papers on which has been built the world's greatest republic.

Both documents were deposited with the state department, Sept. 15, 1789, and they have been officially in the custody of the secretary of state ever since. It appears from the letter Secretary Hughes wrote to the president advising that the two documents be transferred to the library of congress, that they have experienced a rather precarious existence at times.

Hidden in Mill.
On Aug. 20, 1814, just before the capture of Washington by the British, these documents, together with other valuable records, were spirited away from the capital and hidden in an unoccupied grist mill on the Virginia side of the Potomac. A few days later all these papers were removed to Leesburg, Va., and placed in an empty house where they remained hidden until the British troops left Washington and the British fleet had left Chesapeake bay.

For a time the declaration of independence and the constitution were deposited in the patent office which was supposed to be fire proof, but which was gutted by a blaze. The documents were not damaged, however. At the library of congress arrangements will be made so that the documents may be seen by all patriotic Americans.

MAY BECOME U. S. ENVOY TO AUSTRIA

Dr. Emanuel Baruch.

The name of Dr. Emanuel Baruch, prominent New York doctor, has been presented to President Harding as a possibility for the post of American ambassador to Austria. The suggestion was made by a delegation representing the United Societies of American Citizens of German Ancestry. Dr. Baruch was born in San Francisco. He was educated abroad and is well known in Europe through his visits there as U. S. representative at various medical conferences.

"DANDERINE"

Grows Thick, Heavy Hair

35-cent Bottle Ends all Dandruff, Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.—Advertisement.

Everyday Ad-Ventures

You Know The Rest—
Although a bachelor, Mr. George Brooks was known as "Uncle George" to as large a connection of small nieces and nephews, real and adopted, as any man who has ever been a favorite with children.

His brother's children, his sisters' children, and his friends' children all claimed him as their "own Uncle."

These intimate relationships were a great joy to his bachelor heart—except during the month of December! No man could have delighted more in giving presents to his little "relatives," but he simply couldn't think of the right things to give them.

He usually had to close down his office and devote the last few days to a tour of the toy-stores. Though not a strain on his liberal purse, Christmas was a great tax on Uncle George's nerves.

But this year, while reading the Palladium his eye fell on the "Gifts For Children" in the Christmas Gift Suggestions columns in the classified section—

Well—You Know The Rest!

His Christmas shopping for the young nephews and nieces was all settled before he even started for the stores—and the kids are in for the best Christmas event!
