

GREENVILLE TO HAVE LARGE AUDITORIUM; MATERIAL ARRIVES

GREENVILLE, Ohio, Jan. 4.—Greenville is to have one of the largest and best equipped auditoriums in the western part of Ohio. The building will be located near the D. and U. crossing on Wayne street, adjoining the swimming pool.

The structure will be steel, wood and glass with hardwood floor. It will be 120 feet long and 100 feet wide, having 12,000 square feet of floor space. The auditorium will be used for all kinds of athletics, amusements and social gatherings.

The structural steel arrived Monday, accompanied by a crew of engineers and erectors who expect to have the steel work done by the latter part of the week.

The erection of the entire building will be rushed as fast as possible, and with favorable weather conditions will be completed by April 1, according to estimates.

Select Grand Jury

The grand jury for the January term of court, 1922, convened at 10 o'clock Tuesday. All members drawn reporting save Charles Nelson, of the first ward, Greenville, who had been excused. In his stead Mrs. Margaret Patty, first ward, Greenville, was chosen.

The personnel of the jury is as follows: J. C. W. Copeps, second ward, Greenville; James Wilcox, Liberty township; Delbert Miller, New Weston; D. E. Horn, fourth ward, Greenville; L. A. Hess, Patteon township; L. D. George, Wabash township; Mrs. Berl White, Ansonia; Charles Haber, Rossburg; Mrs. Margaret Patty, first ward, Greenville; J. H. Whal, Union City; Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald, Fort Jefferson; C. E. Broadstock, Greenville; Roy Edwards, Liberty township; John Banks, Patterson township; Charles Echelbarger, Twin township.

After being charged by Judge Tee-garden, the jury retired to the Grand Jury room.

It is not expected that the session will last long as only 17 witnesses have been subpoenaed to give testimony.

Credit Association Elects New Directors

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Indiana Rural Credit association in Indianapolis, vacancies on the board of directors were filled by election of the following new directors: Morton S. Hawkins, Frank B. Jaqua, A. A. Scheib, Carl B. Anderson, and Charles McKeand. Mord Carter and William M. Jones remain on the board. The following officers were elected: Chairman of board, Mord Carter; president, William M. Jones; vice-president, Morton S. Hawkins; secretary and treasurer, A. A. Scheib.

The Hawkins' interests now own 96 per cent of the stock of the association, and are negotiating at this time for the balance. The Indiana Rural Credit association has one million dollars capital and nearly the same amount in farm mortgage loans on Indiana farms.

Turnstile Develops Hobby of Collecting Rare Coins

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The feather-weight pressure gate, famed guardian turnstile and subterranean economist of the Interborough Rapid Transit company, has a hobby. It has been discovered as a prodigious collector of old, curious and frequently rare coins.

Superficial observers of the new device, installed a few weeks ago, characterized its peculiarity in one word—noisy—but it remained for the company treasurers to exploit its eccentricity.

Aside from ordinary lead or other metal slugs, the company has reported the automatic boxes have attracted a variety of objects of interest to the studious numismatist—such as 20 centime pieces, welfare checks from Sing Sing prison, flattened pennies and Turkish coins.

DAKOTA SENATOR SUCCEEDS PENROSE AS SENATE LEADER

Senator P. J. McCumber.

With the death of Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, the chairmanship of the powerful senate finance committee passes from the east to the west for the first time in forty years. Penrose is to be succeeded in this important post by Senator P. J. McCumber of North Dakota, a member of the agricultural bloc.

naturally tend to bring about a more favorable solution of this problem than is now presented.

"There are the usual scattered exceptions to any general statement.

Labor is plentiful in some sections, scarce in others. The matter of obtaining money for construction is the most difficult problem of all. It is not that money seems to be so high in price as that it is hard to get, particularly in the agricultural sections.

Good likelihoods of construction lie in the central west and the extreme east. Low price of corn has a deterrent effect upon probable building in surplus corn states of the middle west. Apparently when construction gets well under way it will comprehend a great many dwelling houses in its purpose and intent; this because of the supreme necessity of more adequate housing almost everywhere.

Few things tend to hasten the return of better times than the building industry. Things used in the building of dwelling houses call upon practically all the industries of the country for their products. A general and far-reaching construction program in this country during 1922 is the best possible harbinger of a return to more prosperous conditions."

The late Senator Boise Penrose was a Washington institution. As many stories are told of him in the capital as of another famous senator, John Sharp Williams of Mississippi. The Pennsylvanian was a man of few words but no man in the senate was better equipped to take part in a rough and tumble debate. His sarcasm was withering. A few years ago Penrose had a tilt with J. Ham Lewis, at that time a senator from Illinois. Lewis was known to fame for his pink whiskers and his ready wit. He was tempted to twist Penrose upon his portly form. "It is true," Penrose retorted, "that I am in the full vigor of my manhood and do not have to resort to dyes to make an appearance."

Lewis, stung by the charge that the shade of his whiskers was artificial, replied sharply: "And I, Mr. President, do not need an annual coat or white wash."

Penrose was asked later if he and Lewis were known in Babylon in 2300 B. C.

Lewis were not good friends, "Y-a-a-s," he answered in his best Penrosian drawl, "after dark."

One delightful day last fall Penrose asked Senator Watson of Indiana to go for a drive in the famous red touring car of which Penrose was so fond. Senator Watson said that the first words Penrose spoke on that trip were uttered in Baltimore when he said to the driver, "Go on to Philadelphia." Arriving there Penrose again broke his silence. "Drive back to Washington," he said to the driver. When the car stopped in front of Watson's home the Indiana senator said that he had enjoyed the ride, then for a third time Penrose unsealed his lips, but then merely to erect a grunt of acknowledgement. He had his moods. For days he would maintain a profound silence. At other times he was almost garrulous. Few loved the man, many admired him.

Elements of Greatness

Those who were closest to Penrose recognized that he had many elements of greatness. He made no effort at pretense; he never excused his faults or follies. He had a great contempt for hypocrisy. His life was a lonely one, his pleasures few and his wants were simple. Political battle, in which he asked no quarter and gave none, gave him his greatest enjoyment. And, his friends say, he had a deep love for his country. He gloated over the fact that he had "no international mind." He was opposed to the selection of Hughes for secretary of state, but accepted him for the sake of party harmony. He was once asked whom he thought would make a good secretary of state. "If we had power to resurrect the dead," he replied, "Buffalo Bill would be my choice. There was a real, red-blooded American. That's what we need at the state department."

It is said that the last few months marked a change in Penrose's attitude toward Secretary Hughes.

Frigid Weather Sends Mummers to Hospital

(By Associated Press)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 4.—The frigid wintry weather Monday which sent several scantily clad marchers in the Mummers' parade to the hospital, and kept the spectators stamping their feet and swinging their arms to keep warm, has resulted in a movement to change the date of the annual spectacle to a more balmy season than New Year's day. Easter Monday or the first Saturday in November are tentative dates.

Several of the Mummers who collapsed from the cold were still in the hospital today. None of them was in a serious condition.
