

SALE OF WINE, BEER MEANS SALOON BACK, SAYS DRY LEADER

"The gaining of permission for the sale of beer and light wines by the wets would be the opening wedge for the return of the American saloon of former days," declared Arthur Whitney of Columbus, O., a member of the Flying Squadron, before a fair sized audience at the First Christian church Thursday night.

"The dry forces must use every effort possible not to let the wets gain power in the next congress, the method they are using to get the return of the liquor laws."

"Today there are 37 organizations in the United States formed to fight the prohibition movement. They are using every possible method. They are barring no cost as they have plenty of funds with which to fight against the dry workers. This means that the dry workers will have to keep on the move and on their toes at all times or suffer the pangs of defeat, which we are not going to do."

"In almost every city in the country there are at present small groups of men, meeting absolutely for no other reason than to fight the prohibition movement. They form temporary organizations, draw up a set of resolutions, say they are in convention form, pass these resolutions, and present them to the congress. These resolutions all deal with the repealing or nullifying of the Volstead Act."

Making Canvases.

"Wet organizations are sending men all over the country, in every city of any size making a house to house canvass, getting the names of all people of voting age, trying to influence them to join the organization that seeks to set aside the Volstead Act. These agents soon will be in Richmond as they have planned to make every city in the United States of any population, that has any voting number whatever."

D. Leigh Colvin also gave a short talk on the ways and means by which the wets were trying to obtain the overthrow of the Eighteenth amendment by getting pro-liquor men in control of the coming congress.

The second day of the Flying Squadron visit will find James H. Woerdenyke and C. P. Connolly, delivering the addresses at the First Christian church Friday afternoon and evening. They will speak at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon and at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. Both men will speak in the afternoon and evening.

Oliver W. Steward, Rev. Norma C. Brown and Frank S. Regan, members of the squadron will speak Saturday.
