

PRISON COMMANDER DENIES STATEMENT OF WORLD WAR VET

(By Associated Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 6.—Captain Russell P. Tyler, who was in charge of the prison camp at Bassens, France, during the war, today telegraphed the adjutant general of the army denying statements made yesterday by Edwin Duner of San Francisco before the senate investigating committee, on charges of Senator Watson, of Georgia, Captain Tyler's telegram said: "I saw Fitzgerald killed. It was purely an accident. Fitzgerald was standing in the mass line. An unruly negro prisoner was trying to take a rifle away from a sergeant. The rifle exploded. Fitzgerald was killed by a stray bullet."

Witnesses to the shooting were taken before a board of inquiry, which found Fitzgerald's death accidental. The inspector general's department of the base hospital made an independent investigation and sustained the verdict. There was no solitary confinement at the camp.

"There were no hienantens under me at the camp and I never held that rank."

Claims Exaggeration
The telegram added that Duner's testimony was exaggerated and that no instance had come to Tyler's attention where soldiers were convicted or hanged in France without trial. Amplifying his telegram in a verbal statement, Tyler declared he was not acquainted with Duner and did not remember him as a prisoner at the Bassens camp. He continued: "Part of the time while in France I was a member of the general court-martial of Base Section number 2. While on this court-martial there was only one man convicted and sentenced to be hanged. He was a negro named Jackson, who had been found guilty of murdering two white soldiers when they tried to take him prisoner as a deserter and on a statutory charge. I do not know whether the death sentence was carried out."

PRAYER WILL GET RESULTS, SAYS WORK

Before the latest audience of the series of Week of Prayer services being held by the First Presbyterian and Reid Memorial Presbyterian churches, W. McLean Work, pastor of Reid Memorial church, last night preached on the subject of "Petition," the service being held in the First church.

The speaker mentioned the influence the war had had upon prayer, particularly upon the offering of petitions in showing what the Bible has long taught, that prayer is not always an evidence of piety and that petitions are not always granted in the form in which the request is made.

"Petition," Mr. Work said, "presupposes first of all a passion in the heart of the petitioner for the thing which he asks. The reason so many churches do not pray is because there is nothing they want. There is no reason in Richmond, with its thousands of persons outside the church, and as far as man is able to judge, outside the kingdom of God, for any Christian or any church to be satisfied."

"In the second place petition requires faith. Faith that there is a prayer answering as well as a prayer hearing God. It would be unreasonable to suppose that Nature should supply a response to the cry of all the lower creation and that to the cry of the human soul, 'O God, hear my prayer, my soul after Thee, O God, then should be no answer from Nature's God."

"And petition attacks our comfort because no man can pray with any prospect of having his prayers answered unless he is a willing instrument in the hand of God to answer those prayers."

Yields Results
"Last of all petition yields results. The progress of the church from Pentecost to the year of our Lord 1922 has been made upon its knees. I need not remind you that every great revival, every reform movement, every forward step in the history of the church has been born in prayer. God speaks through his promises to these two congregations tonight. My children, there are still windows in heaven. The streams and fountains of my love still overflow. The storehouse is filled to bursting. Prove me now."

The First church choir gave two special musical numbers. The service Friday night will be held in the Reid Memorial church. Dr. John Joseph Rye will preach upon the subject of "Intercession." The Reid Memorial choir will present two special numbers. On account of the lecture the service will be brief, allowing the audience to reach any other church before the lecture begins.

MAYOR IS AGAINST LOADING CITY OFFICES

Mayor Handley issued a statement Friday morning emphasizing the stand he is taking on appointments to city offices. "I will not go over the heads of departments," he said. "There will be no more places created and no departments will not be loaded up with unnecessary employees. All applications for employment must be made through the heads of departments."

Repeated requests from some citizens for interference by the mayor in their behalf brought forth the statement.

Home Games For Children
How mothers and fathers of Richmond may make their homes interesting and attractive for the little tots during the indoor season.

By MISS MARGUERITE SHARRETT
Recreation Specialist of Community Service

Are you planning a party in your home and haven't a great deal of space for very active games? Here are a few suggestions for a progressive party which needs little space and equipment—just tables enough to seat the guests, four at each table, and the smaller articles mentioned under each game.

For special occasions such as St. Valentine's or George Washington parties, these games might be specially adapted, for instance in number five, colored hearts and hatchets might be used as puzzles instead of the articles mentioned; in number 2, a heart might be substituted for the wheel; and in number 4, some appropriate words as "Saint Valentine" for "George Washington" could take the place of "Community Service."

These suggestions are suitable for children of 12 years and older. In fact the "grown-ups" play them with great enjoyment.

I. Animals—Equipment: A pack of Fitch cards for each table. The cards are distributed evenly among the players. Each player assumes the name of some animal such as "Elephant," "Tiger," "Hippopotamus," "Giraffe," etc., and each knows the names of the other players at his table. The cards of each person are stacked in one pile, face downward, before him. At a signal, a player begins the game by laying the top card face upward on the table beside the original stack. In rotation, each player does the same. Should a player turn up a card corresponding in number or kind to one of his neighbors, each of the players having that card calls the animal name of the other. Whichever speaks the name first gives all of his "upturned" cards to the other, and the game proceeds. The object is to get rid of one's cards. At the signal, those who have the least number of cards receive a "punch" on their tally cards and move to the next table.

II. Tilt-a-Toe, Here I Go—Equipment: (for each table). A paper, on which is drawn a wheel three or four inches in diameter, divided into 12 sections, each section being numbered from one up; a pencil for each player.

At the signal, a player takes the pencil, closes his eyes, circles about the wheel with the pencil, saying "Tilt-a-Toe, Here I Go." He then drops the pencil on the wheel scoring for himself the number of the space touched. Should the pencil fall on a line, no score is made. Each player continues in turn until the signal to stop, when each person's score is added. Those having the highest total move to the next table.

Famous Jockey Who Wed In Richmond, Arrested

Charles Brandt, one time famous jockey, who met his wife while riding at a fair in Richmond 10 years ago, is held in Detroit for selling what was thought to be stolen sweaters, silk stockings and other articles.

Five years ago Brandt was known all over the country as a jockey extraordinary. His wife went with him from Richmond and shared his glory until the drug habit mastered him. He began using drugs to keep down his weight.

His wife was caught stealing several months ago from a Detroit store. She said she was stealing to buy drugs for her husband, who was then a hopeless victim of the drug habit. She was sent to a house of correction.

Stillman Refuses to Pay Cost of Divorce Hearing

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The Stillman divorce suit hearing set for Montreal next week, will not be held because James A. Stillman, the plaintiff, refuses to pay the $7,500 costs requested by his wife, it was announced today by Cornelius J. Sullivan, chief of counsel for the bank.

John S. Brennan, head of Mrs. Anne U. Stillman's legal staff said that unless the money was paid the effort to take testimony of Canadian next week would be abandoned.

This procedure was stipulated in the order for the expense money signed yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Morschouske at Poughkeepsie and appealed from in Brooklyn by the plaintiff. Arguments on the appeal probably will be made soon, the lawyer said.

Home Games For Children

(for each table) Four sets of alphabets. The letters may be written plainly on small squares of paper about three quarters of an inch in size.

The letters are turned over, face downward, in the center of the table. At the signal the players draw the letters from the table, taking one letter at a time. Whenever possible, build a word with the letters drawn, the object of the game being to have the largest number of words when the signal to stop is sounded. The two persons at each table with the largest list of words move.

Word Building
IV. Anagrams (b) — Equipment: A pencil and sheet of paper for each player.

Take the words "Community Service" (or some word having several vowels) and build as many words as possible from this. No letter may be used in any one word more times than it appears in "Community Service." For example, the following: "Rice," "Sieve," "Tine," "Mutiny." The object is to see who can build the largest number of words. The two at each table do so move.

V. Puzzles—Equipment: Four puzzles for each table. (Cut an advertisement or picture postcard in several irregular parts and place in envelopes. All puzzles should be cut into an equal number of parts.)

Each person is given an envelope of puzzle parts and at a signal all begin simultaneously to put the pieces together. The two players finishing first advance.

VI.—Peanut Stab: Equipment, one bowl of peanuts and a hatpin for each table. Hatpins should be of same length.

At a signal the players in turn stab at the peanuts with the hatpin. Only one stab at a time is given a player. If successful, take out the peanut and at the signal stop playing, and count the number of nuts you have. The two players having the most nuts advance to the next table.

The tally cards of the successful players are punched at the close of each game. If desired, a small prize may be presented to the person whose card shows the largest number of punches. The length of time each game is played can be decided by the hosts.

Some of these games and others will compose the program of the recreation institute to be conducted by Richmond Community Service under the direction of Miss Sharretts on Jan. 9, 10 and 11. Enrollment may be made now at the Community Service office.

MARQUIS OKUMA DEAD; NOTED JAPANESE LEADER

COUNT OKUMA

(By Associated Press)
HONOLULU, Hawaii, Jan. 6.—Marquis Okuma, former premier of Japan, is dead, according to a cable message received by the Nippu Jiji, a Japanese tri-lingual newspaper from Tokyo today.

When the Tokio correspondent of The Associated Press in 1916 requested Japan's great modern statesman to give him some material for a sketch of his life Marquis Okuma broke out in a smiling exclamation: "Why a sketch of me?—I am to live to 125. My life's work is only fairly under way."

That conviction, oftentimes voiced, until, as his friends say, he really and sincerely believed in it, is the explanatory essence of Okuma's career. In 1915 and 1916, during the great war, Okuma was prime minister of his country and leading it onward in a time of great international strife with all the enthusiasm and energy and hope of a young man of thirty. He was wonderful in every way—even his enemies thought that.

Okuma was the great bridge between old and new Japan. He took historic parts in the development of the great Meiji reign which opened Japan to western civilization. He raised loans and saw that they were paid. He labored for the abolition of the feudal system and the establishment of a constitutional government. He was minister of finance until he resigned in 1881 because his colleagues rejected his proposal for a more representative government. A year later he formed a progressive party.

In 1888, a year before the promulgation of the constitution, he was appointed foreign minister and undertook the task of revising the treaties which had been concluded with the powers before the restoration. The object was to regain rights previously conceded. It was then that occurred the outrage which crippled him for life, yet did not quench his extraordinary vitality and energy. A young agitator incensed at some of Okuma's methods threw a bomb at his carriage. Okuma was so injured that he suffered the amputation of a leg. In January, 1916, he was again the object of a bomb attempt at Tokio, but escaped unhurt.

The statesman was a member of the second Matsukata ministry and in June 1898 formed a cabinet of his own which lasted six months. Later he took up educational work and founded the famous Waseda university. He wrote constantly. Then when the Yamamoto cabinet fell in 1914 Emperor Yoshihito summoned him to form the ministry which held office during the great European war.

It was under his administration that Japan herself entered the war on the side of the Entente Allies, contributing to the embarrassment of Germany by the capture of her Chinese possession of Kiaochow, and by aiding the Entente powers financially and through the manufacture of munitions. It was also during his administration that the important Russo-Japanese convention of 1916 was arranged and signed.

"Premier Okuma was one of the outstanding figures of Japan," said Robert Hearn, who formerly resided in Japan. "I never met him personally, but saw him often. He was very anxious to meet foreigners and never took umbrage at their views. He was keen in repartee and able to answer the criticisms of foreigners on his country and its policies. No important person visited in Japan in the last 15 years without trying to have a conference with him."

Police Withhold Decision In Grave Opening Case

(By Associated Press)
WINONA, Minn., Jan. 6.—Police today withheld a decision as to whether they would open the grave of Miss Frances Bloch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bloch, to ascertain whether the body had been decapitated in the superstition that such action would end a long series of deaths in the family, after Thomas Bloch was said to have admitted opening the grave of his daughter, and a son, Joseph, to confirm "certain signs," he denied molesting the bodies.

When he opened the grave, he said with the assistance of the neighbor, he found nothing but the bare skeleton. Bloch denied that his intention was to sever the head from the body of his daughter and place it at the foot of the coffin, because of a superstition that the spirit of the daughter had been responsible for the death of five of her brothers since her own death five years ago, police said.

LOOSE ENFORCEMENT COSTLY TO TAXPAYER, SAYS SQUADRON MAN

"The taxpayer who remains indifferent to the enforcement of the laws of the land will pay for his indifference, for as public sentiment lags the worst difficulty will be to enforce the laws," declared Christopher P. Connolly of East Orange, N. J., a member of the Flying Squadron, speaking in the First Christian church Friday afternoon.

"The cost of enforcement will cost higher and be added to the tax bill."

"No laws will be enforced until the public officials make up their minds to enforce them, or when public sentiment becomes sufficiently aroused to compel the officials to enforce them."

"If prohibition does nothing else than to bring about a campaign for the enforcement of all laws it will have served a useful purpose."

Mr. Connolly cited many occasions where officials had all been imprisoned for crookedness and for failure to enforce the law.

"Mr. Connolly referred to a case where several county officials were sent to jail in an Ohio city last summer. One surveyor was sent up for padding the pay-rolls. An auditor was sent over the road for embezzling several thousand dollars, and one man was sent over for bootlegging."

Discusses Confiscation.
"Prohibition does not possess property rights under the constitution. It does not answer the requirements, to produce wealth or minister to happiness, good will, contentment and general prosperity of the people. The government had the legal right of confiscation," said P. H. Woertendyke, another local speaker.

"Personal property is another plea that is being urged on congress, the so-called right to drink, coupled with the representation that millions desire such a privilege. Under the constitution there is no such thing as personal liberty when it comes against the interest of the country as a whole," Mr. Woertendyke added.

ALLIES MUST SOLVE THEIR OWN PROBLEMS, WARNS LLOYD GEORGE

(By Associated Press)
CANNES, France, Jan. 6.—Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain addressing the opening session of the allied supreme council today, warned the allied powers that they could not look to any others but themselves to work out the economic rehabilitation of Europe. He appealed to the allies to set aside prejudice and work together to this end.

Premier Briand convened the council. The meeting was held in the grand saloon of the Cannes yacht club. George Harvey, American ambassador in London, Britain who is an official observer for the United States at the conference, told the correspondent just before he entered the council chamber that he had no intention of speaking at the first session and had no program to place before the allies, as has been rumored.

Swift Work to Experts.
The council is shipping a great deal of the work on committees of experts so as to be free to discuss the larger aspects of the questions on its agenda. Consideration of all features of the proposed international financial corporation and international economic conferences will thus continue in committee while the council is engaged upon other questions.

The reparations experts also will go on with their efforts to reach a basis of agreement as to how to facilitate prompt payment by Germany, and how to divide the first 1,000,000,000 gold marks which are in the hands of the reparations commission.

The heads of delegations present are Premier Briand for France, Premier Lloyd George for Great Britain, Foreign Minister Jaspar for Belgium, Premier Bonomi for Italy, and Baron Hayashi for Japan.

The sessions are being held in the Yacht club where private apartments have been fitted up for Mr. Briand and Mr. Lloyd George. The council room is adorned with tapestries and pictures brought from France, some of which figured in the decorations of the Clock room of the French foreign office where the peace negotiations were held.
