Recruiting for Preachers

A number of denominational colleges with departments of theology are preparing to make an active recruiting campaign next summer to induce young men to enter the ministry. Some of them have sent announcements of their plans to the secular press.

Many reasons have been assigned for the dearth of candidates for the ministry. Probably the greatest deterrent has been the small salaries which congregations hold out as inducements.

The denominations will not fill their theological seminaries with students so long as the congregations do not pay salaries big enough to enable their pastors to provide their families with the comforts of life with other folk enjoy.

In this respect a commendable improvement has taken place recently, but nevertheless the ministry as a profession is still underpaid. Laymen should not argue that a minister or priest works only one day in seven and consequently his pay need not be as high as that of one who toils six full days. The average minister and priest of Richmond works seven days in the week, planning congregational activity, preparing his sermons, co-operating in civic movements, and seeking to improve the lives of the men, women and children with whom he comes into contact.

All denominations are beginning to see that their ministers must be better paid if they hope to attract to the profession wideawake and aggressive young men. The ministry, judged merely from the economic standpoint, must be able to meet the competition of the other professions and callings for the services of alert and enterprising young men if it hopes to attract its share of candidates. If congregations are unwilling to pay adequately for the services of ministers, they need not expect proficient and capable leaders. The future of the church depends just as much on an appreciation of this factor as it does on any other one that may be mentioned.

Basketball Victories

An Indianapolis newspaper wonders why the high school teams of its city, selected from hundreds of boys, are being defeated by teams from smaller cities and towns, whose players in some instances constitute the whole male population of the school.

It seeks the solution in many quarters, not overlooking the temptations in a big city which induce players to break their training rules and to indulge in frivolities and distractions that impair their physical condition.

In small towns and cities, the players usually are boys who have chores to do about their homes or on the farms of their parents. Their idle time is so limited that often they find it difficult to find the time to practice. The absence of amusements and distractions in their communities results in their being in bed early in the evening. The regularity of hours, in addition to the conditioning process of outdoor work, puts them in a splendid condition for the rigors of basketball. This is a sport which taxes physical endurance. It calls for stamina and vigor. The boy who believes he can play masterly basketball and at the same time keep late hours and gorge himself with food, is deceiving himself and contributing to the defeats of his team.

The high school teams of the cities will not be able to defeat the boys from the small towns and rural districts if their players do not obey the rules of right living.

Answers to Questions

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Palladium Information Bureau, Frederick J. Haskin, director, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The bureau does not give advice on legal, medical and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles, nor to undertake exhaustive research on any subject. TODAY'S TALK

By George Matthew Adams, Author of "You Can," "Take It," "Up"

THE NOBILITY OF YOUR WILL

There is a vast chasm between one's mind and will.

We let our minds for hire. They are often put on rations and told to do the thing that brings the most profit. Our minds may become slaves—but not our wills.

The will is the only grand free agent we possess. It stands like a watch dog before the door of our personality. It is a master supreme.

To it must the mind pay daily homage and respect.

Our minds are receptive. They invite. They entertain. But it is the will which decides and runs the house in which the mind must live.

Like an open porch, receiving the dust from all corners of the compass, so is the mind open and liable to the receipt of ideas and thoughts of every color. But it is the will which says which shall stay and which shall go.

We are not responsible for the thoughts which come to us—but we are responsible for the thoughts which we keep.

No human faculty is so apt as the will. Put it to work and it presently begins to accumulate power—and power of such a nature that all the varying experiences of life, in time, bow to its ennobling and inspiring leadership.

Carlisle gave as his belief that the greatest equipment in life was the ability to take trouble.

And who knows better how to take trouble than the one whose will has been trained in the school of self-restraint and restraint?

The physiologist is authority for the statement that the will even "alters the brain by creating new places for the mind to work in."

What nobler master than the will? And how kingly is that man who is made a real man by a finely fashioned will!

It is within your province to find yourself and take complete possession of yourself through your will.

No. 63—Jumping Rubber Band

To make a rubber band jump from the first two fingers to the last two may be done as follows: Stretch the band inward with the other hand and bend all four fingers into the band. Show the back of the hand with the band still on the first two fingers, and then extend all four fingers. The elastic will jump to the last two fingers.

The process may be reversed to bring the band back to its original position.

THE EVIL ACT.

John Jasper drove his touring car and overtook a man who looked as though he'd traveled far, a foot-sore also-ran. "Get in and ride," John Jasper said; "I will," the hobo yipped; then slugged John Jasper on the head, and took his purse and skipped. Along that road a thousand boats are chugging every day; and pilgrims who have lost their souls on foot proceed that way. But now no driver stops his

RED PEPPER FOR RHEUMATIC PAIN

Red Pepper Rub takes the "ouch" from sore, stiff, aching joints. It can not hurt you, and it certainly stops that old rheumatism torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers. Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone. Ask any good druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.—Advertisement.

Restaurant Man Couldn't Eat His Own Food

"It's pretty tough for a restaurant man to have stomach trouble. My customers were always telling me I ought to eat in a good restaurant. The fact was I couldn't eat a thing that didn't bloat me up and no medicines or doctors helped me. I tried everything recommended and at last May's Wonderful Remedy, and I assure you I didn't have to look any further. Since taking it I have been a well man." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. TAX RULING CHANGED ON GROSS INCOMES

The new income tax law, which is effective for 1921, provides that all individuals having a gross income of $5,000 or more, must file a return regardless of the amount of net income.

This is one of the very few changes in the law, and is easily liable to be overlooked, especially by small business men and farmers who never made return before. But who absolutely know that their net income is below the figures which in past years required return, which were $1,000 and $2,000, according to the marriage state.

It would be wise or those who anticipate difficulty in arraying their figures.

Richmond Symphony orchestra, which had held several concerts during the winter, had a membership of 64 and had an enviable record for such a large amateur body during the winter. Two concerts had remained on the list, one for February and the other for the May festival.

FOUR CIRCUSES MERGE.

PERU, Ind., Jan. 13.—The largest circus corporation in the world has just been completed by a merger of the Hagenbeck-Wallace, Sells-Floto, Howe's Great London and John Robinson shows, according to word received here. The capital stock is $2,000,000, and the concern is incorporated under the laws of Ohio, it was said.

The corporation likely will maintain its offices in Cincinnati, but all shows will winter in Peru, it was said. The Robinson and Howe shows are here now.
